Arizona State University Dean College of Nursing

Arizona State University is seeking a leader committed to building the College of Nursing to a position of national prominence. The successful candidate will need to develop a strategy to direct the future development of the College that positions it to be a central figure in the public health needs of the metropolitan region. This strategy must enhance the College's research profile, increase the diversity of the College, maintain and strengthen nurse-managed clinics, address the development of the nursing programs operated by the College at the East and West campuses, initiate the operation of a planned doctoral program, and build a strong presence at the future Downtown campus of ASU, which will be a leading center for biosciences. In addition, the Dean will be expected to build partnerships that bring important investments to the College, as well as engage in fundraising to advance its mission.

Under the leadership of President Michael Crow, ASU is building a new model for an American research university, one that measures its academic quality by the education that its graduates have received rather than the academic credentials of its incoming students; one at which researchers, while pursuing their scholarly interests, also consider the public good; and one whose faculty expands the concept of community service, accepting major responsibility for the health, economic, and social development of its community. The new Dean of the College of Nursing will play a significant role in shaping the university's health education agenda.

Required Qualifications: possess an academic or professional record that merits appointment as a full professor with tenure, including a doctoral degree and one graduate degree in nursing; be eligible for licensure as a Registered Nurse (RN) in Arizona; and have a demonstrated commitment to excellence in research as well as quality undergraduate and graduate instruction.

Desired Qualifications: demonstrated leadership, organizational and management experience; effective written communication skills; proficiency in budgeting and resource management; demonstrated experience working in shared governance with faculty, staff, students, and administrators; experience facilitating external funding; and demonstrated knowledge of institutional perspectives on academic programs.

This position is a full-time, 12-month academic administrative appointment with a preferred starting date of July 1, 2004. The start date is negotiable and the salary is competitive.

Application deadline is February 13, 2004; if not filled, applications will be reviewed weekly as necessary until the search is closed.
