Briefly describe the rationale for disestablishment:

Prior to fall 2012, the School of Music offered the Bachelor of Music in Music Education degree with concentrations in Choral/General, Instrumental and Strings. The School of Music faculty approved a proposal to re-establish an old music education degree code (FAMUSEBM) and create a new unified Bachelor of Music in Music Education degree in fall 2011, and these changes were included in our recent catalog review cycle.

These concentrations reflect antiquated music education job descriptions and do not accurately reflect current teaching assignments. They disenfranchise certain groups: those whose primary teaching assignment is a non-traditional ensemble (e.g., those teaching guitar, mariachi, piano, digital music courses) and community music educators. Eliminating these concentrations allows us to be responsive to the need for increased flexibility in music education and musicianship coursework, and better meets the needs of public school music education.

Therefore, the School of Music is requesting the disestablishment of the BM in Music Education (String) concentration due to the creation of new unified concentration.

Impact on other existing programs: Could include availability of course content for students in other majors who may need it; other.

(Degree, concentration, minor or certificate)

There will be no impact. The new degree concentration FAMUSEBM will replace old concentrations.

Impact on current students: Estimate number of students still enrolled; anticipated date of last graduates; arrangements for continuing students and students in articulated transfer pathways (ex. MAPP, TAG).

Current students will be allowed to complete the concentration they are currently enrolled in or switch to the new unified degree. All coursework for the degree will continue to be offered or an appropriate substitution will be allowed if it makes sense in the student's curriculum.

We have 0 freshmen, 5 sophomores, and 5 juniors in this concentration (also 7 seniors that should graduate spring 2012). We plan on providing necessary coursework and/or appropriate substitution if appropriate.

We have no articulated transfer pathways for this degree program/ concentration.

Additional information: Provide any relevant information not required above that will assist in evaluating the proposal.

We anticipate a small increase in student enrollment into the new unified degree as some students who would not have previously been interested in the segregated concentrations will now see the Bachelor of Music in Music Education as a viable program. Time-to-degree completion should also improve as there will be more flexibility in coursework that students are required to take.
