Subject: Disestablishment of Bachelor Applied Science concentrations

The Morrison School of Management and Agribusiness requests the disestablishment of two concentrations in the Bachelor of Applied Science program effective immediately.

The Morrison School offers the following concentrations in the bachelor applied science degree program:

- Consumer Products Technology (AGCPTBAS)
- Food Retail Management (AGAFBFAS)

The disestablishment of these BAS concentrations is due to low student enrollment and concern over the academic merit of these programs. No students are currently enrolled in these programs. No new students will be admitted. The programs should be removed from the academic catalog in its next publication.
