

Briefly describe the proposed change and rationale for the change:

The School of Music proposes a name change to the Bachelor of Music, Music Education to Music Learning and Teaching. This change communicates how the program addresses music learning and teaching in the most inclusive and diverse settings possible. The name change also avoids misperceptions that the program focuses solely on K-12 music education. The phrase music education has strong associations with K-12 contexts. While the undergraduate and graduate programs lead to K-12 certification, it now prepares students for varied career pathways that may or may not include K-12 schools.

Discuss the impact of this change on current students and/or enrollment:

The name change will not impact our students or their curriculum. The name change implies a more expansive application for our program outcomes: music learning and teaching is for multiple music education venues beyond just K-12 schools.

Dear Dean Bastille,

The music education faculty in the School of Music are in the process of changing the name of the area and all degrees to Music Learning and Teaching.

They explain their rationale in the proposal, "This change communicates how the program addresses music learning and teaching in the most inclusive and diverse settings possible. The name change also avoids misperceptions that the program focuses solely on K-12 music education. The phrase music education has strong associations with K-12 contexts. While the undergraduate and graduate programs lead to K-12 certification, it now prepares students for varied career pathways that may or may not include K-12 schools."

The Provost's Office has requested that we obtain an impact statement from the Mary Lou Fulton Teachers College for the undergraduate degree name change. I've also added the MM and PhD name change documents to this in the event that the Graduate College also requests an impact statement for these name changes as well.

Can you please review this with your college and let me know if you have any questions? We'd like to submit the impact statement by December 1.

Sincerely,

Heather Landes
