Arizona State University Criteria Checklist for

GLOBAL AWARENESS [G]

Rationale and Objectives

Human organizations and relationships have evolved from being family and village centered to modern global interdependence. The greatest challenge in the nuclear age is developing and maintaining a global perspective which fosters international cooperation. While the modern world is comprised of politically independent states, people must transcend nationalism and recognize the significant interdependence among peoples of the world. The exposure of students to different cultural systems provides the background of thought necessary to developing a global perspective.

Cultural learning is present in many disciplines. Exposure to perspectives on art, business, engineering, music, and the natural and social sciences that lead to an understanding of the contemporary world supports the view that intercultural interaction has become a daily necessity. The complexity of American society forces people to balance regional and national goals with global concerns. Many of the most serious problems are world issues and require solutions which exhibit mutuality and reciprocity. No longer are hunger, ecology, health care delivery, language planning, information exchanges, economic and social developments, law, technology transfer, philosophy, and the arts solely national concerns; they affect all the people of the world. Survival may be dependent on the ability to generate global solutions to some of the most pressing problems.

The word university, from universitas, implies that knowledge comes from many sources and is not restricted to local, regional, or national perspectives. The Global Awareness Area recognizes the need for an understanding of the values, elements, and social processes of cultures other than the culture of the United States. Learning which recognizes the nature of others cultures and the relationship of America’s cultural system to generic human goals and welfare will help create the multicultural and global perspective necessary for effective interaction in the human community.

Courses which meet the requirement in global awareness are of one or more of the following types: (1) in-depth area studies which are concerned with an examination of culture-specific elements of a region of the world, country, or culture group, (2) the study of contemporary non-English language courses that have a significant cultural component, (3) comparative cultural studies with an emphasis on non-U.S. areas, and (4) in-depth studies of non-U.S. centered cultural interrelationships of global scope such as the global interdependence produced by problems of world ecology, multinational corporations, migration, and the threat of nuclear war.

Course Description and goals: This class is built around a simple question: What does the average Italian and French person like? What movies and shows do they like to watch? What books do they like to read? What songs do they like to sing? What clothes do they wear and what food do they eat? Through this course, students will have an inside look at the daily life of the average person in these countries, starting from World War II up until the present. The class will be taught in English, and there will be a short introduction to recent Italian and French history and society. Throughout the class, students will be exposed to English translations of original material in order to understand their popular culture in an exciting and engaging way. There will also be a number of guests who will bring their own first-hand knowledge and experiences to the course. To allow students to better understand French and Italian popular culture, we will take a comparative approach with the students' own culture. The goal of this course is to allow students to understand the aspects of these cultures that are not usually taught in higher education, but define the daily cultural consumption of Italians and the French. These themes include food, popular literature and cinema, fashion and design, sport and music.

Course Structure: The course will be divided in 4 modules of about the same length. We will use original material that is both visual and literary in nature, as these are the real things that are exposed to Italians and the French. Students are expected to do guided research and write short reflections based on every model in order to analyze and better understand the material covered.
There will also be a test after every model to gage the knowledge the students have gained throughout the course.

Assignments
- a response paper for each module (4 response papers in total)
- two weekly commentaries (one for each session) on a discussion board about the media and reading material assigned
- Midterm exam (take-home)
- Final project (group power point presentation+ Auto-reflexive paper)

Participation 10%
2 Critical Response Papers) 40%; 10% each
Midterm (take-home) 20%
Final Project (Small Groups) 30%
Critical Response Papers (800-1000 words [2-3 pages] each) on questions and scenarios that draw on course materials and class discussions. Responses should draw points of comparison between works or consider ways in which the theoretical readings contribute to your interpretations of primary materials (primary texts, films, images, etc.). These assignments do not involve any external research – using course materials will suffice. A rubric with specific grading criteria will be provided. (10% each X 4 = 40%)

Take-home midterm with essay questions asking you to relate our theoretical and interpretive readings to the cultural artifacts from the course (primary texts, films, images, etc.). (20%)

Final project that includes a group-based, 20-minute PowerPoint presentation and individually written meta-narratives. In groups of 4-5, you will research, outline, and create collaborative projects to comparatively analyze a cultural phenomenon (food, memory, etc.) or artifact (film, short story, clothing, etc.) in FRE/ITA and in American culture. The final project includes: 1) a presentation proposal about how you are integrating a theoretical approach from the course into your project, 2) an in-class PowerPoint presentation, and 3) a final report on your contribution to the group project in which you may include material that did not fit into the presentation. Additional guidelines about the project will be provided as we approach the date for in-class project work (Week 11). (30%)

Participation: please come to class with your book, articles, or on-line texts, prepared to participate in reading and discussion. Class participation includes listening carefully to your classmates, and post your double weekly commentary on Black Board. (10%)

Course Policies and Needs

Attendance
Attendance is mandatory and worth half your participation grade (5%). Let me know ahead of time if you cannot come to class. After 4 unexcused absences (i.e. not for verifiable health reasons), your grade for the course will drop a step (i.e. B > B-), and another step for each additional absence. If you miss 8 classes, you will have missed 25% of the course and I can no longer give you a grade, which means you will need to drop the course or I will need to fail you. You can keep track of how many classes you have missed on Blackboard in your grade center.

Cell Phones and Computers: Before class begins turn off cell phones. You may use computers at my discretion, for taking notes and reading materials on Blackboard, but not for surfing the web or checking email. If you do not follow these rules, you will be marked absent for that class.

Plagiarism and Academic Integrity: The aim of education is the intellectual, personal, social, and ethical development of the individual. The educational process is ideally conducted in an environment that encourages reasoned discourse, intellectual honesty, openness to constructive change and respect for the rights of all individuals. Self-discipline and a respect for the rights of others in the university community are necessary for the fulfillment of such goals.

According to the Student Academic Integrity Policy, every assignment that the student completes must be her/his own work and created only for the relevant class. Plagiarism may result in a failing grade for the assignment or for the course, or in expulsion from the University.
Definitions of plagiarism and ways to avoid it are available at: https://provost.asu.edu/index.php?q=academicintegrity/students#avoid_plagiarism

Guidelines for Papers
Papers must be double-spaced and responsive to all aspects of the assignment, including length (provide a word count on the first page), and prepared according to the Modern Language Association Handbook for Writers of Research Papers or Chicago Manual of Style. Make sure you document every reference—in quotation or paraphrase—including page numbers, using the in-text format: “Four score and seven years ago” (304). Feel free to write in the first person. Most important, a paper is an argument: no argument, no paper. Support your thesis with evidence.

Special Needs: If you are in need of special accommodation for assignments or exams, please communicate this to me at the beginning of the semester to assure that your needs are met. In order to guarantee the necessary accommodation, you must present documentation from the Disability Resource Center, located in the Matthews Center.

SILC Learning Support Services: Located in the basement level of the Language and Literature Building (administrative offices in LL64), the SILC LSS provides technology-focused instructional support for students and faculty in the School of International Letters and Cultures. It is an excellent place to inquire about resources to assist you in this and other courses - for example, with the presentations and for films needed for the course. Go to http://silc.asu.edu/node/620 to find out more.
