New College, College of Letters & Sciences, College of Liberal Arts & Sciences

Course description:
Growth of the Republic from the Civil War to the present.

Requested designation: Social and Behavioral Sciences-SB
Note: a separate proposal is required for each designation requested

Eligibility:
Permanent numbered courses must have completed the university's review and approval process.
For the rules governing approval of omnibus courses, contact Phyllis.Lucie@asu.edu or Lauren.Leo@asu.edu.

Submission deadlines dates are as follow:
For Fall 2015 Effective Date: October 9, 2014
For Spring 2016 Effective Date: March 19, 2015

Area(s) proposed course will serve:
A single course may be proposed for more than one core or awareness area. A course may satisfy a core area requirement and more than one awareness area requirements concurrently, but may not satisfy requirements in two core areas simultaneously, even if approved for those areas. With departmental consent, an approved General Studies course may be counted toward both the General Studies requirement and the major program of study.

Checklists for general studies designations:
Complete and attach the appropriate checklist
- Literacy and Critical Inquiry core courses (L)
- Mathematics core courses (MA)
- Computer/statistics/quantitative applications core courses (CS)
- Humanities, Arts and Design core courses (HU)
- Social-Behavioral Sciences core courses (SB)
- Natural Sciences core courses (SQ/SG)
- Cultural Diversity in the United States courses (C)
- Global Awareness courses (G)
- Historical Awareness courses (H)

A complete proposal should include:
- Signed General Studies Program Course Proposal Cover Form
- Criteria Checklist for the area
- Course Catalog description
- Course Syllabus
- Copy of Table of Contents from the textbook and list of required readings/books

Respectfully request that proposals are submitted electronically with all files compiled into one PDF. If necessary, a hard copy of the proposal will be accepted.

Rationale and Objectives

Social-behavioral sciences use distinctive scientific methods of inquiry and generate empirical knowledge about human behavior, within society and across cultural groups. Courses in this area address the challenge of understanding the diverse natures of individuals and cultural groups who live together in a complex and evolving world.

In both private and public sectors, people rely on social scientific findings to consider and assess the social consequences of both large-scale and group economic, technological, scientific, political, ecological and cultural change. Social scientists' observations about human interactions with the broader society and their unique perspectives on human events make an important contribution to civic dialogue.

Courses proposed for a General Studies designation in the Social-Behavioral Sciences area must demonstrate emphases on: (1) social scientific theories, perspectives and principles, (2) the use of social-behavioral methods to acquire knowledge about cultural or social events and processes, and (3) the impact of social scientific understanding on the world.

Revised April 2014
Proposer: Please complete the following section and attach appropriate documentation.

ASU--[SB] CRITERIA

A SOCIAL-BEHAVIORAL SCIENCES [SB] course should meet all of the following criteria. If not, a rationale for exclusion should be provided.

THE FOLLOWING TYPES OF COURSES ARE EXCLUDED FROM THE [SB] AREA EVEN THOUGH THEY MIGHT GIVE SOME CONSIDERATION TO SOCIAL AND BEHAVIORAL SCIENCE CONCERNS:

- Courses with primarily arts, humanities, literary or philosophical content.
- Courses with primarily natural or physical science content.
- Courses with predominantly applied orientation for professional skills or training purposes.
- Courses emphasizing primarily oral, quantitative, or written skills.
Explain in detail which student activities correspond to the specific designation criteria. Please use the following organizer to explain how the criteria are being met.

<thead>
<tr>
<th>Criteria (from checksheet)</th>
<th>How course meets spirit (contextualize specific examples in next column)</th>
<th>Please provide detailed evidence of how course meets criteria (i.e., where in syllabus)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1. Understanding and knowledge of human interaction.</td>
<td>This class examines the interactions of class, ethnic and racial, gender, and regional groups in a historical perspective.</td>
<td>For example, Reconstructing the South focuses on the conflict between black and white southerners after the Civil War; the Second Industrial Revolution, on the conflict between capital and labor in Gilded-Age America; Incorporating the West, on the conflict between white settlers and Native Americans in the trans-Mississippi West; From the Old to the New Immigrant on nativist responses to the shift in the source of immigration from Northwestern to Southern and Eastern Europe. All classroom discussions and writing assignments revolve around understanding human interaction in a specific time period.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2. Studying social behavior.</td>
<td>Social behavior is studied primarily from a historical perspective. This perspective is supplemented by geographical, economic, and sociological/anthropological perspectives.</td>
<td>Historical analysis is employed throughout the course. Geographical analysis takes the form of maps (see Give Me Liberty!, p. xix); economic analysis, the form of tables and figures (see Give Me Liberty!, p. xx); and sociological/anthropological analysis, the form of ethnography (see the table of contents of Voices of Freedom).</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3. Emphasizing distinctive knowledge bases of the social and behavioral sciences.</td>
<td>While the course makes the most use of historical knowledge, it also draws on economic, geographic, and sociological/anthropological knowledge bases.</td>
<td>For example, economic knowledge informs discussions of the Second Industrial Revolution, the Business of America, Affluent Society, and Stagflation; geographic knowledge informs discussions of Becoming a World Power, America and the Great War, the World at War, and the Cold War; and sociological/anthropological analysis informs discussions of Rediscovery of America, Baby Boom and Suburbanization, and Culture Wars.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
4. Using social and behavioral science perspectives and data.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>The course uses economic, geographical, and social/anthropological data to supplement historical data.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Thus the map entitled &quot;The United States in the Caribbean, 1898-1941&quot; (p. 731) illustrates American intervention in Latin America; Table 18.1 (p. 689) illustrates the foreign-stock composition of early twentieth-century American cities; and Figure 21.1 (p. 833) dramatizes the Great Depression's impact on employment. First-hand accounts in Voices of Freedom personalize historical forces such as imperialism, immigration, and immiseration.</td>

• greater awareness of historical concepts such as cause and effect, similarity and difference, and change and continuity
• a firm foundation for further study of History

Required texts:

Academic integrity: ASU West's Academic Integrity Policy will be strictly upheld. Any instance of cheating, plagiarizing, or otherwise presenting someone else's work as your own will not be tolerated, and will result in failure in this course and a report to the Dean of Students. A zero-tolerance policy is in effect. Please refer to:
http://www.west.asu.edu/studentlife/forms/acadinteg.htm

Attendance: Daily attendance is expected. Unexcused absences will lower your grade; participation in class discussion will raise it.

The final grade will be figured as follows:

- Four-to-five page essay due Monday, October 6  25 points
- Four-to-five page essay due Monday, November 10  30
- Four-to-five page essay due Friday, December 5  35
- Ten one-page responses to questions posted on Blackboard  10

Total 100 points
Grading Scale:

A+ 98-100
A  94-97
A- 90-93
B+ 88-89
B  84-87
B- 80-83
C+ 78-79
C  70-77

Between 1898 and 1934, the United States intervened militarily numerous times in Caribbean countries, generally to protect the economic interests of American banks and investors.
and prosperity enjoyed by the people of the United States." Freedom, they believed, was largely an economic ambition—a desire to escape from "hopeless poverty" and achieve a standard of living impossible at home. While some of the new immigrants, especially Jews fleeing religious persecutions in the Russian empire, thought of themselves as permanent emigrants, the majority initially planned to earn enough money to return home and purchase land. Groups like Mexicans and Italians included many "birds of passage," who remained only temporarily in the United States. In 1908, a year of economic downturn in the United States, more Italians left the country than entered.

The new immigrants clustered in their own shops, theaters, and community organizations, and often continued to speak their native tongues. As early as 1900, more than 1,000 foreign-language newspapers were published in the United States. Churches were pillars of these immigrant communities. In New York's East Harlem, anti-clerical Italian immigrants, who resented the close alliance in Italy between the Catholic Church and the oppressive state, participated eagerly in the annual festival of the Madonna of Mt. Carmel. After Italian-Americans scattered to the suburbs, they continued to return each year to reenact the festival.

Although most immigrants earned more than was possible in the impoverished regions from which they came, they endured low wages, long hours, and dangerous working conditions. In the mines and factories of Pennsylvania and the Midwest, eastern European immigrants performed low-wage unskilled labor, while native-born workers dominated skilled and supervisory jobs. The vast majority of Mexican immigrants became poorly paid agricultural, mine, and railroad laborers, with little prospect of upward economic mobility. "My people are not in America," remarked one Slavic priest, "they are under it."

CONSUMER FREEDOM

Cities, however, were also the birthplace of a mass-consumption society that imbued new meaning to American freedom. There was, of course, nothing unusual in the idea that the promise of American life lay, in part, in the the state of Washington similar to the New York measure it had constitutional a year earlier. It turned aside challenges to Social and the Wagner Act. In subsequent cases, the Court affirmed federal regulation of wages, hours, child labor, agricultural production, and other aspects of economic life.

ing a new judicial definition of freedom, Chief Justice Charles pointed out that the words “freedom of contract” did not appear in the Constitution. “‘Liberty,’” however, did, and this, Hughes continued, “is protection of law against the evils which menace the health, life, and welfare of the people.” The Court’s new willingness to view Deal marked a permanent change in judicial policy. Having tens of economic laws unconstitutional in the decades leading up to the 1930s, justices have rarely done so since.

THE SECOND NEW DEAL

Court made its peace with Roosevelt’s policies, the momentum of New Deal slowed. The landmark United States Housing Act of 1937, initiating the first major national effort to build homes for low-income Americans. But the Fair Labor Standards Bill failed to reach over a year. When it was signed in 1938, it banned the use of child labor from commerce, set forty cents per hour as the minimum wage, and the minimum wage for over hours ending forty per week. or piece of New Deal legislation that established the practice of making a wide range of wages and wages and conditions, another radical change from pre-Depression

1937 also witnessed another of the economy. Economic conditions improved, as New Deal measures reduced the need for farm subsidies and new government programs. The result was a strong increase in business investment, productivity, and the stock market

The New Deal did not really solve the problem of unemployment, which fell below 10 percent only in 1941, as the United States prepared to enter World War II.
