Catalog Description: Examines the origins, the development, and the outcomes of the movement that we call "crusades" by connecting the military aspect of the crusades to broader developments. Focuses primarily, but not exclusively, on the period 1095-1453. Geographically covers chiefly the Mediterranean, and, to a lesser extent, northeastern Europe.

Syllabus Description: This course will examine the origins, development, and multiple outcomes of the movement that came to be known as "the crusades" by focusing on primary source material and by connecting the military aspect of the crusades to broader developments. This includes studying the basic aspects of western, Byzantine, and Islamic societies, western and Islamic law on interfaith relations, the development of centralized church and states in the west, the decline of the Byzantine Empire, and the emergence of the Ottoman Empire. The class focuses primarily, but not exclusively on the period 1095-1453. Geographically, we will deal chiefly with the Mediterranean, and, to a lesser extent, with western and northeastern Europe. This class will help diligent students develop skills useful no matter the career path one chooses, such as analysis and synthesis of written information, including sources and studies, formulation of arguments, and their presentation in convincing fashion. The class presupposes regular attendance and active student participation; these will help students achieve a deep and nuanced understanding of complex historical processes, including inter-religious/inter-cultural conflict. This class is designed to help all students in acquiring the skills necessary for composing longer papers based on individual research.

Arizona State University Criteria Checklist for

SOCIAL AND BEHAVIORAL SCIENCES [SB]

Rationale and Objectives

The importance of the social and behavioral sciences is evident in both the increasing number of scientific inquiries into human behavior and the amount of attention paid to those inquiries. In both private and public sectors people rely on social scientific findings to assess the social consequences of large-scale economic, technological, scientific, and cultural changes.

Social scientists' observations about human behavior and their unique perspectives on human events make an important contribution to civic dialogue. Today, those insights are particularly crucial due to the growing economic and political interdependence among nations.

Courses proposed for General Studies designation in the Social and Behavioral Sciences area must demonstrate emphases on: (1) social scientific theories and principles, (2) the methods used to acquire knowledge about cultural or social events and processes, and (3) the impact of social scientific understanding on the world.
Proposer: Please complete the following section and attach appropriate documentation.

I. Course Description:

We will examine the origins, development, and multiple outcomes of the movement that came to be known as “the crusades” by focusing on primary source material and by connecting the military aspect of the crusades to broader developments. This includes studying the basic aspects of western, Byzantine, and Islamic societies, western and Islamic law on interfaith relations, the development of centralized church and states in the west, the decline of the Byzantine Empire, and the emergence of the Ottoman Empire. The class focuses primarily, but not exclusively, on the period 1095-1453. Geographically, we will deal chiefly with the Mediterranean, and, to a lesser extent, with western and northeastern Europe. This class will help diligent students develop skills useful no matter the career path one chooses, such as analysis and synthesis of written information, including sources and studies, formulation of arguments, and their presentation in convincing fashion. This class is designed to help all students in acquiring the skills necessary for composing longer papers based on individual research.

Sources (also “primary sources”) = in our case, what the peoples we study wrote in the past
Studies (also “secondary sources”) = what modern historians write about those peoples

   Class Attendance * see note

* This course involves a great deal of hands-on work in class with sources and studies. Attendance is mandatory. You will lose 2.5 points per missed meeting except for the first occurrence prior to Spring Break, and the first occurrence after Spring Break. No exceptions without documented/allowed per university regulations reason (sickness, observance of religious holidays, university events, etc.) will be made (consult ACD 304–04: Accommodation for Religious Practices: http://www.asu.edu/aad/manuals/acd/acd304-04.html; ACD 304–02: Missed Classes Due to University-Sanctioned Activities: http://www.asu.edu/aad/manuals/acd/acd304-02.html). Two and a half points can easily be the difference between two grades.

 Papers (5 double-spaced pages) are graded on a 40-point scale. The points awarded for steps 1 and 2 as well as 5 of the points for Step 3 are automatic for every student who submits the paper in time. Whoever is late without a documented acceptable reason will forgo these points. Re-writing is a critical component of the learning process; all students must re-write their papers. Re-written papers must be submitted by the last day of class.

Work that does not adhere to the assignment guidelines, for example analysis of a document or a paper on a topic and/or sources not approved by the instructor will receive a score of zero (0). Work in which plagiarism is detected will receive a score of zero (0) and other, more substantial penalties, may also be assessed. On plagiarism see the section on academic integrity below.

IV. Attendance and Office Hours:

Attendance: this course aims at providing knowledge about past cultures while fostering skills that may be useful to students in any career path. Obtaining the skills and knowledge necessary for a good final grade will be least challenging if you regularly attend our meetings, do the assigned readings, and if you do not hesitate to come to office hours to discuss any difficult points with your professor.

OFFICE HOURS: If you have trouble with something, say something: You are strongly encouraged to come to office hours and discuss any difficult points. Office hours, however, are no substitute for meetings and readings. You are required to come prepared. If you come to discuss primary sources, for example, you must have already read and sought to understand the primary source(s) in question.

If you need a recommendation letter please inform your instructor no less than 10 days prior to the date you need it.

• IMPORTANT NOTE:
IN ACCORDANCE WITH UNIVERSITY GUIDELINES, YOUR PROFESSOR IS AVAILABLE TO PRIVATELY DISCUSS ANY NEEDS, INCLUDING DISABILITY ACCOMMODATIONS.

V. CLASS GUIDELINES

By this stage in life, most students have internalized a reasonable level of basic ethics. Nevertheless, here is a simple guide for the semester.

1. Academic Integrity: Generally, each student is responsible to observe the college rules concerning academic integrity found at https://provost.asu.edu/academicintegrity. Specifically, it is required that all work submitted will be a student’s own. Therefore, it is necessary to give credit to all material used in building your paper by citing all words, content, and/or ideas taken from primary and secondary works and used in your paper. Cite these upon each occasion that you have drawn upon them (that is, it is not enough to cite a source only once in your paper if you use it on more than one occasion). It is forbidden to submit the work of another as one’s own as well as to submit one’s own work from another class without prior authorization by your professor. Any student found to have violated the college’s academic standards will be subject to penalties. These include, as a minimum, a significant reduction of the score for assignments in which a single plagiarized sentence is found or a score of 0 for any assignment in which more than a single plagiarized sentence is found. Potentially, plagiarism may result in exclusion from the university.

2. Respect the Learning Environment: Avoid any action that may disturb the lecturer or other students. In case of doubt, simply consider if an action contributes to the purpose and benefit of the class as a whole. Turn-off cell phones to prevent disrupting class. Exceptions will be made for emergencies, such as child-care needs, or other critical issues. Computers are a most useful learning tool. I will not police the way you use them in class. However, using your computer for purposes other than working for this class would not provide you with any positive return to your investment in this class.
Agree to disagree: Learning can be challenging on many levels. Some issues we will discuss may be perceived as sensitive and controversial. You are asked to respect everyone’s right to hold views different from your own. Vigorous debate in class that is based on the class material is a most useful learning tool. The promotion of one’s personal take on a given matter through blanket, general statements, however, is of no use to the learning process and is therefore poor use of a precious resource: time. Be thoughtful: some statements may be interpreted as hostile and offensive. Finally, the goal of your instructor is to foster your knowledge of past cultures, your analytical skills, and your ability to make well-argued cases. Hence expect your instructor to challenge any views and/or to play the devil’s advocate whenever he feels that this will foster the learning process.

Threatening Behavior: All students are expected to maintain proper conduct. Consult http://www.asu.edu/aad/manuals/ssm/ssm104-02.html: “Interfering with the peaceful conduct of university-related business or activities or remaining on campus grounds after a request to leave may be considered a crime.”

3. Email Correspondence: Throughout the semester, I will send course announcements to the class via e-mail, whenever necessary. I will use your official college e-mail addresses only. Please be sure that your accounts are working and check them regularly. Messages will not be sent to non-college e-mail addresses. If you wish to contact me, e-mail should only be used for scheduling appointments or for any other brief communication. E-mail is not appropriate for substantive questions about the course material. For the latter, visit office hours or schedule an appointment. Please adhere to a standard courteous format for email correspondence. Barring emergencies on my end I will answer e-mails with appropriate content as soon as I can, typically within 48 hours. You should not expect me to answer during the weekend (though I may), during holidays, or during the spring break, and I will not answer to e-mails that do not adhere to the guidelines in this paragraph.

Course/Instructor Evaluation

NClAS evaluation policy statement “The course/instructor evaluation for this course will be conducted online 7-10 days before the last official day of classes of each semester. Your response(s) to the course/instructor are anonymous and will not be returned to your instructor until after grades have been submitted. The use of a course/instructor evaluation is theoretically an important process that allows our college to (1) help faculty improve their instruction, (2) help administrators evaluate instructional quality, (3) ensure high standards of teaching, and (4) ultimately improve instruction and student learning over time. Completion of the evaluation is not required for you to pass this class and will not affect your grade, but your cooperation and participation in this process is critical. About two weeks before the class finishes, watch for an e-mail with "NClAS Course/Instructor Evaluation" in the subject heading. The email will be sent to your official ASU e-mail address, so make sure ASU has your current email address on file.” You can check this online at the following URL: http://www.asu.edu/epoupdate/.

FINAL NOTE:
I may make adjustments to this syllabus, such as altering the topic of a specific meeting or substituting some readings with others, if I feel that this would facilitate the learning process.
