College/School: New College of Interdisciplinary Arts and Sciences
Department: School of Humanities, Arts & Cultural Studies

Prefix: AMS  Number: 201  Title: Introduction to American Studies  Units: 3

Is this a cross-listed course?  No  If yes, please identify course(s): N/A

Is this a shared course?  No  If so, list all academic units offering this course: N/A Note: For courses that are cross-listed and/or shared, a letter of support from the chair/director of each department that offers the course is required for each designation requested. By submitting this letter of support, the chair/director agrees to ensure that all faculty teaching the course are aware of the General Studies designation(s) and will teach the course in a manner that meets the criteria for each approved designation.

Is this a permanent numbered course with topics?  No

If yes, all topics under this permanent numbered course must be taught in a manner that meets the criteria for the approved designation(s). It is the responsibility of the chair/director to ensure that all faculty teaching the course are aware of the General Studies designation(s) and adhere to the above guidelines.

Chair/Director Initials: N/A (Required)

Rationale and Objectives

The contemporary "culture" of the United States involves the complex interplay of many different cultures that exist side by side in various states of harmony and conflict. The history of the United States involves the experiences not only of different groups of European immigrants and their descendants but also of diverse groups, including, but not limited to, American Indians, Latinos, African Americans, and Asian Americans—all of whom played significant roles in the development of contemporary culture and together shape the future of the United States. At the same time, the recognition that gender, class, and religious differences cut across all distinctions of race and ethnicity offers an even richer variety of perspectives from which to view ourselves. Awareness of our cultural diversity and its multiple sources can illuminate our collective past, present, and future and can help us to achieve greater mutual understanding and respect.

The objective of the Cultural Diversity requirement is to promote awareness and appreciation of cultural diversity within the contemporary United States through the study of the cultural, social, or scientific contributions of women and minority groups, examination of their experiences in the U.S., or exploration of successful or unsuccessful interactions between and among cultural groups.

Course Description
This course provides an intellectual foundation for the interdisciplinary study of American culture, history, and society. Students will be introduced to ideas, methods, tools, and theories in the vibrant field of American studies. American Studies is an interdisciplinary field that examines American history, society, and culture and what they mean contextually. In this class, you will be introduced to interdisciplinary methods of analysis to investigate American culture and you will learn how to contextualize cultural forms within the time period in which they were produced in order to answer questions similar to the ones listed below. In other words, we will look at them as the product of specific social and historical circumstances with particular attention given to the relationship between American culture, race, class, and gender. We will try to determine how those circumstances might have shaped a given work of art, film, music, or other cultural artifact and how the issues, events, and how mood affects the public reception of different cultural forms and their manifestations contemporarily. We will think about broad theoretical issues, such as how each example of popular culture is part of broader systems of human relationships and patterns of social change or continuity. We will think about how inter- and intercultural relationships facilitate or impede the establishment of community. Finally, through our analysis of popular culture you will become a critical analyst of the popular culture you encounter every day.

Some guiding questions for our approach to this class are:

What does it mean to be American? Who decides, and who is included or excluded? Are there uniquely American characteristics, experiences, identities, art forms, places, politics, or stories? How do race, gender, sexuality, and class inflect and inform American identity and shape American culture?

This course meets general studies requirements for C and L.

Course Objectives:

1. Critically analyze the history of American popular culture
2. Demonstrate an understanding of the economic, social, and cultural aspects of American Culture
3. Understand political and ideological dimensions of popular culture
4. Comprehend concepts of race, class, ethnicity, and gender as they relate to popular culture both historically and in contemporary society
5. Apply course components to critically think about the popular culture personally experienced daily

Learning Outcomes
1. Identify where various ethnic and cultural groups converge and diverge in their distinctly American identities.
2. Discuss the cultural, ethnic, political, social, and economic forces that shape cultural practices and interethnic relationships in the U.S.
3. Demonstrate an understanding of how the history of race, gender, and sexuality have contributed to American culture and a national identity.
4. Compose thoughtful reader responses that demonstrate an understanding of the texts.
5. Interpret scholarly and cultural artifacts

Course Format
This course is highly interactive and will combine lectures, film viewings, and discussion. Because much of the material is to be understood in context of class discussions, it is recommended that all class sessions are attended. However, in case a session is missed, all materials will be on reserve at Fletcher Library for review outside of class.

Blackboard
This class makes extensive use of the course Blackboard site. You are expected to check the course site regularly throughout the week. On it, I will be posting regular announcements, weekly readings, assignments, and other course documents and materials essential to your understanding of key concepts.

Attendance and Class Discussions:
This exploration of fashion and the body is designed in a seminar format. You will therefore be expected to actively participate in a critical and informed manner during class. Readings are to be completed before class. Twenty percent of your final grade will depend upon your classroom contributions. The weekly reading load for this course is, on average, about 100 pages a week or fifty pages a class.

Excused absences are those due to religious holy day observances (please notify me in advance that you will be missing class) and illness (a doctor’s excuse will be necessary). More than three unexcused absences will result in the lowering of your final course grade. I encourage you to visit me during office hours to clarify issues in the readings or assignments. See ASU policies regarding absences:
• excused absences related to religious observances/practices that are in accord with ACD 304–04, “Accommodation for Religious Practices”
• excused absences related to university sanctioned events/activities that are in accord with ACD 304–02, “Missed Classes Due to University-Sanctioned Activities”

Learning Community
I strive to create a participatory learning community in the classroom in which students can claim agency over their education. Agency in the context of education means that students recognize that they can and should be the ones shaping their educational experience in collaboration with others involved in the university such as instructors and act accordingly. As part of this, I believe that all participants in a course, not only the instructor, have valuable knowledge, insight and analysis to contribute as co-learners. To have meaningful, authentic, and effective discussions of ideas, we must be thoughtful about how we engage each other in the classroom so as not to replicate patterns of oppression. Given these realities, among others, creating a truly participatory and egalitarian learning environment is not possible; however, it is a goal to which we still strive toward. In intentionally engaging and acknowledging these realities, we can move as close as possible to creating a participatory learning environment.

Student Conduct Code:
The University seeks an environment that promotes academic achievement and integrity, that is protective of free inquiry, and that serves the educational mission of the University. Similarly, the University seeks a community that is free from violence, threats, and intimidation; that is respectful of the rights, opportunities, and welfare of students, faculty, staff, and guests of the University; and that does not threaten the physical or mental health or safety of members of the University community. As a student at the University you are expected adhere to Board of Regents Policy: Student Code of Conduct. To review the Student Code of Conduct, please see: https://eoss.asu.edu/dos/srr/codeofconduct. The conduct code specifically addresses disruptive classroom conduct, which means engaging in behavior that substantially or repeatedly interrupts either the instructor's ability to teach or student learning.

Use of Personal Electronic Devices in the Classroom:
Using personal electronic devices in the classroom setting can hinder instruction and learning, not only for the student using the device but also for other students in the class. To this end, the University establishes the right of each faculty member to determine if and how personal electronic devices are allowed to be used in the classroom. For complete information, please reference: http://www.asu.edu/aad/manuals/acd/acd125.html#Requirements

Disability Accommodations: The University is committed to providing quality education to all students regardless of ability. Determining appropriate disability accommodations is a collaborative process. You as a student must register with Disability Services and provide documentation of your disability. The course instructor must provide information regarding a course's content, methods, and essential components. The combination of this information will be used by Disability Resource Center to determine appropriate accommodations for a particular student in a particular course.
For more information, please reference the Disability Resource Center:
https://eoss.asu.edu/drc

Written Assignments and Grading Criteria:
1. Two short essays of 5 double-spaced, typed pages that will call for critical and informed analyses based on the readings or the issues raised in class. The details of each assignment will be discussed in class (each is 20% of final grade).
2. One final project presented to the class and written in approximately 10 double-spaced, typed pages. Further details of this assignment will be discussed in class (40% of final grade).

I will not address grade disputes during class. Grades will only be discussed in my office no sooner than 2 days after the assignment has been returned. Arguments for a grade change must be well-justified and based on submitted work.

Academic Integrity You are bound by the New College and ASU’s policies regarding plagiarism and cheating. Violation of these rules is grounds for failure in the course. Policies may be found here: https://provost.asu.edu/sites/default/files/AcademicIntegrityPolicyPDF.pdf

Required Readings:
1. Bruce Burgett and Glenn Hendler, Eds. Keywords for American Cultural Studies. (New York: NYU Press, 2014)
