Arizona State University Criteria Checklist for

HUMANITIES, FINE ARTS AND DESIGN [HU]

Rationale and Objectives

The humanities disciplines are concerned with questions of human existence and meaning, the nature of thinking and knowing, with moral and aesthetic experience. The humanities develop values of all kinds by making the human mind more supple, critical, and expansive. They are concerned with the study of the textual and artistic traditions of diverse cultures, including traditions in literature, philosophy, religion, ethics, history, and aesthetics. In sum, these disciplines explore the range of human thought and its application to the past and present human environment. They deepen awareness of the diversity of the human heritage and its traditions and histories and they may also promote the application of this knowledge to contemporary societies.

The study of the arts and design, like the humanities, deepens the student’s awareness of the diversity of human societies and cultures. The fine arts have as their primary purpose the creation and study of objects, installations, performances and other means of expressing or conveying aesthetic concepts and ideas. Design study concerns itself with material objects, images and spaces, their historical development, and their significance in society and culture. Disciplines in the fine arts and design employ modes of thought and communication that are often nonverbal, which means that courses in these areas tend to focus on objects, images, and structures and/or on the practical techniques and historical development of artistic and design traditions. The past and present accomplishments of artists and designers help form the student’s ability to perceive aesthetic qualities of art work and design.

The Humanities, Fine Arts and Design are an important part of the General Studies Program, for they provide an opportunity for students to study intellectual and imaginative traditions and to observe and/or learn the production of art work and design. The knowledge acquired in courses fulfilling the Humanities, Fine Arts and Design requirement may encourage students to investigate their own personal philosophies or beliefs and to understand better their own social experience. In sum, the Humanities, Fine Arts and Design core area enables students to broaden and deepen their consideration of the variety of human experience.

Course Description and Objectives

Welcome to the course African and African Diaspora Women Writers. This is a survey course that will explore themes of race, class, gender, and ethnicity in the creative fiction of black women writers of African descent in the United States, the Caribbean, and Africa. We will discuss and analyze how themes such as migration, postcoloniality, discrimination, slavery, gender and family issues, intersect and highlight culture and the lives of women across cultures through their literary traditions.

Additional Goals are to:
- discover how personal ideas and feelings about human concerns add to an understanding and interpretation of the writer’s cultural ideas and beliefs
- familiarize the literary context with a variety of works by and about women writers of the diaspora
- increase the ability to express critical responses to literature through written, visual, and aural components that will include music and film
- increase awareness of factors in literature that influence reader responses to the works
- enhance the ability to use literature as an experience which helps reader understanding of different world views
- discuss and note various responses to and contextual interpretations of literature
- discover how literature provides a meaningful dimension to social transformation

Students will actively participate in class discussions and are responsible for the active learning process; and will attend class regularly. Attendance will be taken at each class session. Regularly missed class sessions are considered a violation of ABOR and university guidelines regarding disruptive class behavior. I suggest that you take this course at another time if you are not able to have regular attendance.

BlackBoard: There will be a shell for this course on Blackboard. Please make sure that you know how to access this classroom tool. The syllabus will also be located here. (if you loose the hard copy that you will get the first day, you can print it out from blackboard. ) there will be announcements on Blackboard as well.

Students are encouraged to announce any events, speakers or lectures related to the course. The readings are selected on the basis of diverse ideas and approaches to reading autobiography, essays and fiction and aspects of challenging issues in the context of the remarkable and, indeed, surging interests in the context of black women cross culturally.

Scholastic Dishonesty and Plagiarism: Scholastic dishonesty includes cheating on assignments or examinations; plagiarizing, misrepresenting as your own work any part of work done by another or taken from internet free/pay essay web sites (such as termpapers.com, etc); submitting another student’s paper as your own, or submitting the same paper to meet the requirements of more than one course without the approval and consent of all instructors concerned. Since all instructors are obligated to report instances of scholastic dishonesty, please save me from doing so. Remember that all written work not derived directly from your own mind and integrity must be acknowledged as such; refer to the MLA Style Guide or a similar reference work.

The team presentation project is explained below.

IF YOU DON'T FEEL COMFORTABLE IN DOING TEAM WORK OR DON'T HAVE THE TIME, I SUGGEST THAT THIS COURSE IS NOT FOR YOU.

| The final essay exam (take home) will be 10-12 pages with a minimum of 3 bibliographic sources that you will read and include in your discussion in the essay. The essay will adhere to MLA style and format. You will get a topic for the final exam essay. |

Objectives of the Team Facilitation:

- to discuss and analyze the major issues/ideas/points of view of the readings
- to consider the historical and cultural context of the readings
- to provide questions/statements/relevant quotes for the class from your point of view and analysis
- to enable successful public presentations and speaking
- to practice/improve your PowerPoint skills

Note on Planning Ahead: I can make some copies that you may need for the facilitation if you submit to me at least by the Wednesday prior to your Monday presentation. You may also consider break-out groups for discussion/activity/related to your Team Assignment. On writing good questions you should think of questions/quotes/statements as an opportunity to guide the discussion toward the readings and/or specific passages you find to be most interesting or those that highlight critical issues of the readings. Sign-ups for the team presentations will be on the second class meeting.

ADDITIONAL GUIDELINES

1. Cell phones, pagers, etc. Out of respect for me and your classmates, please turn them off during class session. No cell phones or hand held devices are allowed to be used during exams and quizzes. During the mid-term exam, you may not leave the room until you finish the exam. Thus make sure that you are comfortable before you begin the exam.

2. Extra Credit: No extra credit assignments in this course.

3. In class activities and projects cannot be made up.

4. Courtesy and Respect: Be aware that this class will be composed of diverse members; it is your responsibility to use appropriate and respectful language in class and in writing and to respect the opinion and culture of the professor and of other students, per university guidelines.
5. If you must leave class early or arrive late please let me know in advance by email or a telephone call. If you are chronically late to class or regularly leave early, or if you are not prepared to participate in the discussions because you haven’t completed the readings, you will lose credit in the area of attendance and class participation. Please do not arrive late in this class.

More stipulations:

• Please remember to respect the opinions of others, especially when they disagree with your own. Learn to listen—be careful not to monopolize discussions. Everyone should feel comfortable in speaking and joining discussions in this class.

• Bring your honest efforts to the course. Your commitment to the course and to each other will make the class time vibrant, pleasurable, and successful for you and for me.

• I encourage you to make use of my office hours; I am very good about responding to your email questions in a timely manner.

• Again about Plagiarizing: Plagiarizing will result in an “XE”—failure—for the course. If you don’t understand what plagiarizing is, consult the web site above or ask me. [Link to website]

Academic Freedom and Sensitive Course Content

Teaching/learning is an organic, dynamic process that includes a range of creative techniques designed to engage students’ thinking and to promote evidence-based, data-driven understanding. Whatever the field or interdiscipline, teaching methods occur in many forms that are meant to raise awareness of other perspectives. The process requires free, open, civil respectful and safe inquiry whether in the humanities, sciences, social sciences or any other field. The course readings may address potentially sensitive subject matter in the context of the dynamic and interrelated process of teaching, facilitating and learning.

A PATHBREAKING WORK of scholarship that will reshape our understanding of the Harlem Renaissance, The Practice of Diaspora revisits black transnational culture in the 1920s and 1930s, paying particular attention to links between intellectuals in New York and their Francophone counterparts in Paris. Brent Edwards suggests that diaspora is less a historical condition than a set of practices: the claims, correspondences, and collaborations through which black intellectuals pursue a variety of international alliances.

Edwards elucidates the workings of diaspora by tracking the wealth of black transnational print culture between the world wars, exploring the connections and exchanges among New York–based publications (such as Opportunity, The Negro World, and The Crisis) and newspapers in Paris (such as Les Continents, La Voix des Nègres, and L’Etudiant noir). In reading a remarkably diverse archive—the works of writers and editors from Langston Hughes, René Maran, and Claude McKay to Faulette Nardal, Alain Locke, W. E. B. Du Bois, George Padmore, and Tiemoko Garan Kouyaté—The Practice of Diaspora takes account of the highly divergent ways of imagining race beyond the barriers of nation and language. In doing so, it reveals the importance of translation, arguing that the politics of diaspora are legible above all in efforts at negotiating difference among populations of African descent throughout the world.

"Nothing short of a masterpiece. By looking at the way black life, thought, struggles and quite literally, words, are translated across the black Francophone and Anglophone worlds, Edwards reveals how Paris became a locus for the development of black modernism and internationalism during the crucial interwar years."

—Robin D. G. Kelley, author of Freedom Dreams

"Because of Brent Edwards’s imaginative research, subtle questioning, and acute powers of synthesis, this book succeeds from start to finish."

—Arnold Rampersad, author of The Art and Imagination of W.E.B. Du Bois and The Life of Langston Hughes

"Brent Edwards is a fine literary critic and historian as alert to the tensions and anxieties of difference and distance as to the yearnings for affiliation and solidarity. The Practice of Diaspora is a stunning excavation of the transnational sites and circuits of modern black culture."

—Hazel Carby, author of Race Men

Jean Rhys's reputation was made upon the publication of this passionate and heartbreaking novel, in which she brings into the light one of fiction's most mysterious characters: the mad woman in the attic from Charlotte Brontë's Jane Eyre.

A sensuous and protected young woman, Antoinette Cosway, grows up in the lush, natural world of the Caribbean. She is sold into marriage to the coldhearted and prideful Rochester, who succumbs to his need for money and his lust. Yet, he will make her pay for her ancestor's sins of slaveholding, excessive drinking, and nihilistic despair by enslaving her as a prisoner in his bleak British home.

In this best-selling novel, Rhys portrays a society so driven by hatred and skewed in its sexual relations, that it can literally drive a woman out of her mind.

"Working a stylistic range from moody introspection to formal elegance, Miss Rhys has us traveling under Antoinette's skin. It is an eerie and memorable trip."

The Nation

"The novel is a triumph of atmosphere — of what one is tempted to call Caribbean Gothic atmosphere — it has an almost hallucinatory quality."

New York Times

Norton now has all of Jean Rhys's fiction available in paperback, including After Leaving Mr. Mackenzie, Good Morning, Midnight, Voyage in the Dark, Quartet, and Jean Rhys: The Collected Short Stories.

Toni Morrison has come to be recognized as one of the most important novelists in America today—and Sula ranks high among her extraordinary triumphs. This rich and moving novel traces the lives of two black heroines—from their growing up together in a small Ohio town, through their sharply divergent paths of womanhood, to their ultimate confrontation and reconciliation. The one, Nel Wright, chooses to stay in the place of her birth, to marry, to raise a family, to become a pillar of the tightly knit black community. The other, Sula Peace, rejects all that Nel has accepted. She escapes to college, submerges herself in city life, and when she returns to her roots, it is as a rebel, a mocker, a wanton sexual seductress. Both women must suffer the consequences of their choices; both must decide if they can afford to harbor the love they have for each other; and both combine to create an unforgettable rendering of what it means and costs to exist and survive as a black woman in America.

"They are enormously, achingly alive...this novel is a howl of love and rage, playful and funny as well as hard and bitter."
—The New York Times

"In characters like Sula, Toni Morrison's originality and power emerge."

"That rare novel whose characters are unforgettable. It is an expression of liberation not to be missed."—Alice Walker
Set in Rhodesia in the 1960s, this mesmerizing novel is an evocative story of a girl's coming of age and a sharply etched portrait of the human devastation wrought by colonialism.

Tambu, an adolescent girl who yearns to be free of the constraints of her rural village, thinks her dreams have come true when her wealthy uncle offers to sponsor her schooling. But she soon learns that the education she receives at his mission school comes with a price. There she meets her British-educated cousin, the worldly and rebellious Nyasha, who is chafing under her father's authority and struggling to reconcile her divided loyalties. A compassionate witness to her cousin's struggle and a sensitive observer of the women in her village, Tambu narrates their world with compelling insight and veracity.

Praise for Nervous Conditions

—The African Times

"Tsitsi Dangarembga [has written] as fine a novel as the subcontinent has produced in recent years."
—The New Republic

"Like many heroes of the bildungsroman, Tambu slowly reaches some painful conclusions—about her family, her proscribed role as a woman, and the inherent evils of colonization... The novel becomes Tambu's keening—a resonant, eloquent tribute to the women in her life, and to their losses."
—Publishers Weekly

"Dangarembga's characters are fascinating, and the issue of freedom is examined dispassionately and firmly. A unique and valuable book."

MARIANA BÀ was born in Dakar, Senegal, in 1929. She was brought up as a Muslim by her maternal grandparents. She attended the French School (now the Berthe Malmberg School) in Dakar and the Ecole Normale in Rufisque. During school holidays she studied the Koran under the imam of the main mosque in Dakar. Mariama Bà is a primary school teacher and has long been active in the feminist movement in Senegal. So Long a Letter, which in 1980 won the first Noma Award for Publishing in Africa, is her first novel. The translator Modupe Bodé Thomas is a Lecturer in French at the Polytechnic, Ibadan, Nigeria.

So Long a Letter is a sequence of reminiscences, some wistful, some bitter, recounted by Ramatoulaye, who has recently been widowed. The letter, addressed to her old friend Assatou, is a record of her emotional survival after her husband’s abrupt decision to take a second wife. His choice is Binetou, the best friend of their young daughter. Although sanctioned by Islam, his action is a calculated betrayal of Ramatoulaye’s trust and a brutal rejection of their life together. The novel is a perceptive portrait of a Muslim woman in a society in transition, of her grief, her courage and her dignity. It is a study of the isolation of married women who refuse to accept polygamy in a society that takes it for granted; it is testimony of, and a tribute to, the plight of those articulate women who live in social milieux dominated by attitudes and values that deny them their proper

"Angelita Reyes covers texts by African, African American, and Afro-Caribbean women writers and contextualizes each with historical material often discovered by the author herself through field research in the Caribbean, Europe, the United States, and Africa. She reveals points of continuity in the history of African Americans in the Americas and across the Atlantic world. By taking note of the complexities of the literary and historical forms of colonization and imperialism this work stands to have a unique place in the field."

—Myriam J. A. Chaney, author of Framing silence: Revolutionary Novels by Haitian Women

Bending the personal and the historical, the practical and the theoretical, Angelita Reyes draws on a wide range of texts from Africa and the African diaspora to establish mothering as a paradigm of progressive feminisms. Reyes creates a comparative dialogue among the fictions of five postcolonial women writers: Toni Morrison, Pauline Marshall, Simone Schwarz-Bart, Jean Rhys, and Martina Baá

Angelita Reyes is an Assistant Professor of African, African-American, and Multicultural Studies at the University of Minnesota.
