Course Description
HST 456 is an interdisciplinary introduction to the Vietnam War(s), which approaches the topic from a number of different angles. While its primary focus is the American War in Vietnam (1959-1975), the course also attempts to give due attention to the wider course of Vietnamese history, before and after the conflict; to the French war in Indochina that preceded American involvement; to the impact of the war on the United States itself, politically and culturally; and to the aftermath of the wars in both Vietnam and the United States. The course materials include Addington’s authoritative narrative history of the wars, Melvin Small’s study of the anti-war movement in the United States; Truong Nhu Tang’s celebrated memoir as a Viet Cong soldier; Edelman’s edition of U.S. soldiers’ letters home during the war; and Clarence Wyatt’s study of the role of the American press during the war.

Meeting Social and Behavioral Sciences Criteria
HST 456 meets the criteria for the General Studies “Social and Behavioral Sciences” designation by (1) by advancing basic understanding and knowledge of human interaction in the course of the French and American wars in Vietnam, 1946-1975; (2) by bringing the tools of a wide range of social and behavioral sciences to bear on the study of the Vietnam Wars - historical analysis (book by Addington, political science (books by Small and Wyatt), cultural geography (Addington); social psychology and sociology (Small, Wyatt, Edelman); and (3) by placing particular emphasis on the relation between primary sources (documents, correspondence, memoirs, journalism) and secondary interpretation, in explaining and understanding major historical episodes such as the Vietnam War.

Instructor: Brock Ruggles (Brock.Ruggles@asu.edu)
Teaching Assistant: Jon Flashnick (Jon.Flashnick@asu.edu)

DESCRIPTION AND OBJECTIVES:

History 456 focuses on the Vietnam War, and in this class we will explore the war from several different angles. While the primary emphasis will be on United States involvement in Vietnam, we will also examine the Vietnamese perspective, French involvement in Southeast Asia, the role of dissent on the home front, and the role of the U.S. press. To study history is to trace and understand change over time, and we will be approaching the history of the war as a dynamic, investigative process. A firm understanding of the past is an essential tool for thinking critically about the present, and this course seeks to provoke thought, discussion, and reflection about the war’s origins, course, and consequences. Students will also develop and enhance skills of analysis and evaluation by reading and discussing various perspectives on the Vietnam War.

REQUIREMENTS:

This Internet course will be delivered via Blackboard, which is available at MYASU. Since this class requires no attendance and has no lecture component, each student is largely responsible for his or her own learning. Over the semester, we will read five books, participate in ten online discussions, and write two separate, three-to-five-page essays. The discussions and essays are required and graded components of the course that allow each student to demonstrate knowledge, comprehension, application, analysis, synthesis, and evaluation of the readings. Grading rubrics for each assignment, class announcements, and the group discussion forum will be available on the Blackboard site. Additionally, all assignments will be submitted through Blackboard. Since we will not meet face to face, please use e-mail to contact me with questions about assignments, content, or any problems that arise. Please allow up to 36 hours response time. The syllabus lays out your responsibilities. While I may make adjustments, your basic work duties are those you see here. If you take the class, you agree to follow this document.

   http://library.west.asu.edu/refguides/integrity/asu-policies.html.
   - Cheating: Any student who cheats on any assignment will automatically fail the course and be subject to punishment through proper university channels.
   - Plagiarism: Representing someone else’s work as your own will be considered plagiarism. If you borrow material from a book, article, or website be sure to acknowledge the source with some type of citation and quote any phrases or sentences borrowed word for word from any author. This policy includes the assigned readings. Any student who plagiarizes on any assignment will receive a grade of 0 for the assignment. Any student who plagiarizes a second time will automatically fail the course and be subject to punishment through proper university channels.

2. The class environment: I believe in and deeply respect freedom of expression. Please exercise it with reasoned and logical arguments and use evidence to support your positions. Personal attacks are never appropriate, and I will insist on a collegial atmosphere online. Inappropriate behavior, such as flaming other students during discussions, sending inappropriate emails and messages, or using the discussion group for anything other than focusing on the questions asked will lead to an immediate request for you to leave the class.

3. Extra credit: There is no extra credit work for this course.
4. Make-up work: There is no make-up work except in cases of legitimate, documented emergencies.

5. Late assignments: Late assignments will be reduced a grade level for each day late. It is crucial in a self-directed class that students complete assignments in a timely manner. All assignments must be turned in by May 1, 2007 to receive a grade.

6. Grade complaints: None can be made until 48 hours after you receive the grade, nor more than one week after it.

7. Incompletes: I have never given an incomplete and will not do so without compelling, documented justification.

Editorial Reviews

Product Description
In his previous books, most notably Patterns of War Since the Eighteenth Century, Larry H. Addington has proven himself a masterful guide to the causes and conduct of war in the western world. In his new book, Addington turns his narrative skills to a brief history of the war in Vietnam. Not intended as a competitor to the many excellent comprehensive studies of the Vietnam Era, this book presents a short, narrative history of the origins, course, and outcome of the America's military involvement in Vietnam. Addington begins with a review of the history of Vietnam before the coming of the French, the impact of French imperialism, and the United States' collaboration with Ho Chi Minh during the Second World War. He examines the course of the French Indochina War and the Cold War origins of the early American involvement in Vietnam. He then traces in more detail U.S. policy after the 1954 Geneva Accords, its role in the establishment of a permanent and independent state in South Vietnam, and its role in the outbreak of a new war. As the narrative turns to America's deepening involvement in the war, Addington examines the U.S. strategy of waging a limited ground war, and the domestic impact of its policies on public support and on the military involvement. He suggests reasons for the ultimate failure of U.S. policy under President Johnson and examines the successes and failures of the policy of withdrawal under President Nixon. Addington concludes with an overview of the aftermath of the war and a summing up of America's experience in Vietnam. Based upon years of experience teaching about the war, "America's War in Vietnam" will prove a useful introduction and a concise reference to America's longest and most controversial war.
