Arizona State University Criteria Checklist for

GLOBAL AWARENESS [G]

Rationale and Objectives

Human organizations and relationships have evolved from being family and village centered to modern global interdependence. The greatest challenge in the nuclear age is developing and maintaining a global perspective which fosters international cooperation. While the modern world is comprised of politically independent states, people must transcend nationalism and recognize the significant interdependence among peoples of the world. The exposure of students to different cultural systems provides the background of thought necessary to developing a global perspective.

Cultural learning is present in many disciplines. Exposure to perspectives on art, business, engineering, music, and the natural and social sciences that lead to an understanding of the contemporary world supports the view that intercultural interaction has become a daily necessity. The complexity of American society forces people to balance regional and national goals with global concerns. Many of the most serious problems are world issues and require solutions which exhibit mutuality and reciprocity. No longer are hunger, ecology, health care delivery, language planning, information exchanges, economic and social developments, law, technology transfer, philosophy, and the arts solely national concerns; they affect all the people of the world. Survival may be dependent on the ability to generate global solutions to some of the most pressing problems.

The word university, from universitas, implies that knowledge comes from many sources and is not restricted to local, regional, or national perspectives. The Global Awareness Area recognizes the need for an understanding of the values, elements, and social processes of cultures other than the culture of the United States. Learning which recognizes the nature of others cultures and the relationship of America's cultural system to generic human goals and welfare will help create the multicultural and global perspective necessary for effective interaction in the human community.

Courses which meet the requirement in global awareness are of one or more of the following types: (1) in-depth area studies which are concerned with an examination of culture-specific elements of a region of the world, country, or culture group, (2) the study of contemporary non-English language courses that have a significant cultural component, (3) comparative cultural studies with an emphasis on non-U.S. areas, and (4) in-depth studies of non-U.S. centered cultural interrelationships of global scope such as the global interdependence produced by problems of world ecology, multinational corporations, migration, and the threat of nuclear war.

COURSE SYLLABUS
INTRODUCTION TO AFRICAN AND AFRICAN DIASPORA STUDIES 200 12:00pm-1:15pm TTH
COWDN215

COURSE DESCRIPTION AND OBJECTIVES: This course is generally an introduction to African and African Diaspora Studies. More specifically, it is an interrogation of the salience of race in these fields of studies, as well as opportunity to assess the African Diaspora’s historical and contemporary influence on international relations, transnational relations, foreign policy, diplomacy, repatriation, and development in Africa and its Diaspora. This course also queries the issue of identity among Diasporans (old and new), while providing a backdrop against which the frequently posed question in the run-up to the 2008 US Presidential election “Is Obama Black enough?” can be posed. Also, the more long-standing question “Is Pan Africanism still relevant?” as an ideology and a movement, is a question which will also be broached throughout the semester. The main objective of this course is to introduce and expose students to pertinent concepts, theories, perspectives, and debates in African and African Diaspora Studies.

COURSE FORMAT: This course is a reading intensive course. You must read in order to participate effectively. The teaching and learning methodology of this course is based mostly on interactive discussions, films, guest lectures, and student presentations. Guest lectures by AAAS core and affiliated faculty will feature prominently in the class. Class participation figures into your final grade for the course.

ASSIGMENTS AND GRADING: You will have 3 map/data collection exercises and five 3-page double-spaced 12-point font thinkpieces due on readings. Your 5 thinkpieces will account for 50% of your final grade (10% each). Your map/data collection exercises will account for 30 (likewise, 10% each), and class attendance and participation 20%. Together, they total a possible 100%. Students will be asked to make presentations on readings, and write in-class reaction papers. There will be no final in-class exam, only a final paper which is counted among the ones mentioned above.

For each day your assignment is late you will earn an automatic one-letter grade reduction. Do not send your assignments to class by a mate or by email, unless I have indicated to do so.
PLAGIARISM: The use of someone else’s words or ideas (verbatim or paraphrased) without giving that person due credit is not acceptable academic behavior. It constitutes plagiarism and will earn you automatic ejection from this course and consequences deemed appropriate by the university.

EMAIL AND CELL PHONES: Matters of pertinence relevant to the course are welcome by email and will be addressed within a reasonable time frame. I do not constantly sit on the net, or repeat class discussions over email in case of your absence. You are responsible for making up your own work. PLEASE ENTER COURSE NUMBER IN THE SUBJECT LINE OF YOUR EMAIL. Please turn off cell phones during class. Texting during class can be a cause of failure.

Pointers for your Thinkpieces

1) Read/watch all of the assigned books/articles/films.

2) For your benefit, summarize and synthesize the information provided, including lectures/discussions/films. To do this, ask yourself
   a) What is/are the author(s) saying? What are the themes that emanate from the readings etc? Do the authors share the same perspective? Do their arguments differ? If so, in what ways? Do their arguments make sense? How are their arguments linked to the course description and objectives?
   b) Develop your original argument based on knowledge that you have gained from the books/articles/films/discussions. What do you think about the arguments and conclusions that emanate from these, and why? Armed with information, construct an informed argument, which reflects the critical attention you have given to the assignment.
   c) DO NOT TURN IN SUMMARIES OR REVIEWS. We have all read/watched/heard the same information. DO NOT DO EXTENSIVE RESEARCH. FOCUS ON THE SHARED READINGS/WORKS ASSIGNED IN CLASS.
   d) Do not use someone else's words or thoughts (verbatim or paraphrased) without citations as this constitutes plagiarism and carries heavy penalties.

3) Engage the AAAS, political, or political science-related concepts/terms/theories that we have discussed thus far, and that are relevant to the topic. Make relevant linkages.

4) Do not exceed the page limit. Do not turn in a reference sheet unless you must use additional sources.

5) Refrain from using "I", "my", "myself" etc. This is not a personal narrative.

Map and Data Collection Assignments

1. Individually, you are to use an outline map of the continent of Africa and identify, by writing in, countries, capitals, and major bodies of water. You are then to choose 4 African countries and collect the following data for each. Present in chart form:
   a) former colonial power
   b) year of independence
   c) name of head of state (president/prime minister)
   d) years of tenure of head of state
   e) GNP/GDP
   f) PCI
g) amount of external debt

h) population size

i) number of racial groups

j) number of ethnic groups

k) number of migrants (including refugees) who leave the country

l) countries to which they immigrate

You may add additional variables that you deem relevant on which to collect data. Adding variables is not a requirement.

Please draft a one-page observation of what the data tells you, and turn this in with your map and data chart. Add a reference sheet to indicate your sources of information.
This book is dedicated to the blacks, reds, browns, and yellows who have resisted the Racial Contract and the white renegades and race traitors who have refused it.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

INTRODUCTION

1. OVERVIEW
   - The Racial Contract is political, moral and epistemological
   - The Racial Contract is a historical actuality
   - The Racial Contract is an exploitation contract

2. DETAILS
   - The Racial Contract norms (and races) space
   - The Racial Contract norms (and races) the individual
   - The Racial Contract underwrites the modern social contract
   - The Racial Contract has to be enforced through violence and ideological conditioning

3. “NATURALIZED” MERITS
   - The Racial Contract historically tracks the actual moral/political consciousness of [most] white moral agents
   - The Racial Contract has always been recognized by nonwhites as the real moral/political agreement to be challenged
   - The “Racial Contract” as a theory is explanatorily superior to the raceless social contract
