Course Description
HST 334 examines the historical transformation and transitions of African Americans and emphasizes their creation of a unique culture of struggle and resistance as they sought to give meaning to freedom, in the wake of the American Civil War. It begins with emancipation and reconstruction, as experienced by African Americans, and moves to a sustained consideration of the migration processes and the emergence of individual and collective black leaders throughout the 20th century. Key issues studied include the changing status of African American women, the entry of black men and women into the professions, the dynamic dimensions of black popular culture, black protest movements, and diverse black ideologies such as Afrocentricity and Black Nationalism, an assessment of the current “urban crisis,” and the emergence of the Hip-Hop nation as a powerful force in global society.

Meeting Social and Behavioral Sciences Criteria
HST 334 meets the criteria for the General Studies “Social and Behavioral Sciences” designation by giving students a basic understanding and knowledge of a centrally important cycle of human interaction – the experiences of African Americans, in the period from the Civil War to the present. It brings the methods and understandings of a number of social sciences – history, cultural geography, political science, social psychology – to bear on these experiences; it particularly stresses the importance of historical study, based on the interpretation of primary sources, in grasping the course of African American history; and it combines use of a historical textbook The African-American Odyssey, Vol. II, with a set of specific studies, considering African American women (White, Too Heavy a Load); athletes (Rhoden, Forty Million Dollar Slaves), and music (Change, Can’t Stop, Won’t Stop: A History of the Hip Hop Generation), from a variety of social-scientific viewpoints.
ASU--[SB] CRITERIA

A SOCIAL AND BEHAVIORAL SCIENCE [SB] course should meet all of the following criteria. If not, a rationale for exclusion should be provided.

1. Course is designed to advance basic understanding and knowledge about human interaction.

2. Course content emphasizes the study of social behavior such as that found in:
   - ANTHROPOLOGY
   - ECONOMICS
   - CULTURAL GEOGRAPHY
   - HISTORY
   - LINGUISTICS
   - POLITICAL SCIENCE
   - SOCIAL PSYCHOLOGY
   - SOCIOLOGY

3. Course emphasizes:
   a. the distinct knowledge base of the social and behavioral sciences (e.g., sociological anthropological).
   OR
   b. the distinct methods of inquiry of the social and behavioral sciences (e.g., ethnography, historical analysis).

4. Course illustrates use of social and behavioral science perspectives and data.

Course Objective:
This course examines the transformation and transitions of African Americans and emphasizes their creation of a unique culture of struggle and resistance as they sought to give meaning to freedom. We begin with the emancipation and reconstruction experiences of African Americans and move to a sustained consideration of migration processes and the emergence of individual and collective black leaders throughout the twentieth century. Key issues include the changing status of African American women, the emergence of black men and women in the professions, the dynamic dimensions of black popular culture, black protest movements and diverse black ideologies such as Afrocentricity and Black Nationalism, an assessment of the current “urban crisis,” and the emergence of the Hip Hop nation as a powerful force in global society.

Key Areas of Emphasis:
1. The first part of the course begins with the official break from the slave past. In a sense the emphasis commences with the founding of the National Association of Colored Women (NACW) in 1896 and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) in 1909, the death of Booker T. Washington in 1914, and the Great Migration of the World War I era. This period witnessed the rise of militant integrationism as a dominant ideology and strategy of African Americans. Changes during this time also occurred in gender roles, as black men and women redefined their relationship and expectations through political, economic, and cultural pursuits.

2. The second half of the course underscores change, conflict, and the dismantling of social, economic, and political structures of racial oppression. By World War II, African Americans had launched a sustained attack on the ideology of white supremacy. Black professionals gained control over existing and developing educational, health care, legal, and social institutions within black communities. From 1960 to the present, major changes have occurred in the United States and throughout the world: technological innovations, decolonization, communism and its collapse. Within the U.S. we focus on major Supreme Court cases, the Civil Rights and Black Power Movements, the rise of elected progressive black officials and society’s response, and the deepening hold of poverty on so many African Americans in our inner cities. We end with reflections on the power of the Hip Hop nation, and the cultural modifications African Americans are creating out of the fabric of their lives.

Requirements:
Students are required to attend all lectures. 3 points will be deducted from the student’s final grade for each absence he logs after the first 3 absences. Students must come to each class prepared to ask a question and/or offer a comment about the assigned reading for the day. Students are also required to take three exams, including exam number one, a midterm exam, and final examination. Exams will test the extent to which students have mastered the lectures, reading assignments, and films. Make-up exams are only considered after verification of a documented personal or family emergency (i.e. a signed physician’s note, etc.). Academic integrity is a must. Students who are caught cheating on exams or in any other capacity, will receive an “XE” for the course.

Students in this course are held responsible to promptly report to the instructor any emergency, illness or difficulty that would impede the completion of assignments or prevent a responsible student from completing her work to the best of her ability. The student should make a good faith effort to report the problem as soon as it is known to him so that I can explore the fullest range of options available to assist the student in corrective action. If the student postpones discussing the matter until the very end of the term -- for example in seeking a withdrawal -- she will be asked not only to document the problem but also to demonstrate that extenuating circumstances that prevented her timely discussion of the problem with the instructor.

Inasmuch as ASU is an institution of higher learning, students will be required to be respectful of their professor and fellow classmates. Disruptive behavior will not be tolerated. Cellular phones and pagers must be turned off prior to entering the classroom. Students who engage in disruptive behavior, such as excessive absences, tardiness, flagrant combativeness, egregious vulgarity, talking out-of-turn, eating, reading non-course related materials, and answering cellular phones and pagers, are subject to failure and dismissal from the course at the instructor’s discretion. Although having a laptop in class opens up new learning possibilities for students, they are often utilized in ways that are inappropriate. Please refrain from instant messaging, e-mailing, superfluous Internet surfing, playing games, writing papers, doing homework, etc., during class time.

Acceptable uses of laptops include note taking, working on assigned in-class activities, projects, and discussions that require laptop use. It is easy for your laptop to become a distraction to you and to those around you. Inappropriate laptop use will be noted and may subject you to dismissal, grade reduction, and failure. For Arizona State University’s Student Code of Conduct, and its policy on academic integrity, contact Student Affairs in the Office of Student Life at (480) 965-6547, or http://www.asu.edu/studentaffairs/studentlife/judicial/.

Four required texts comprise the assigned readings for the course. Participation grades are based upon attendance, contributions to class discussions, and the extent to which students commit themselves to this course professionally and intellectually. Lectures on historiography are essential. I will introduce students to a wide range of historians and their writings and varying interpretations. Films will be shown to emphasize particular dimensions of course subject matter, and the lives and experiences of key individuals. Discussions will follow each film. Throughout the course, students will be challenged to think critically and analytically about the intersection of race, gender, class, ethnicity, religion, sexuality, exploitation, domination, and resistance in African American history and life.
