ELIGIBILITY: Courses must have a current Course Equivalency Guide (CEG) evaluation. Courses evaluated as NT (non-transferable are not eligible for the General Studies Program.

MANDATORY REVIEW:
- The above specified course is undergoing Mandatory Review for the following Core or Awareness Area (only one area is permitted; if a course meets more than one Core or Awareness Area, please submit a separate Mandatory Review Cover Form for each Area).

POLICY: The General Studies Council (GSC) Policies and Procedures requires the review of previously approved community college courses every five years, to verify that they continue to meet the requirements of Core or Awareness Areas already assigned to these courses. This review is also necessary as the General Studies program evolves.

AREA(S) PROPOSED COURSE WILL SERVE: A course may be proposed for more than one core or awareness area. Although a course may satisfy a core area requirement and an awareness area requirement concurrently, a course may not be used to satisfy requirements in two core or awareness areas simultaneously, even if approved for those areas. With departmental consent, an approved General Studies course may be counted toward both the General Studies requirements and the major program of study.

5.) PLEASE SELECT EITHER A CORE AREA OR AN AWARENESS AREA:
Core Areas: Select core area... Awareness Areas: Historical Awareness (H)

6.) On a separate sheet, please provide a description of how the course meets the specific criteria in the area for which the course is being proposed.

7.) DOCUMENTATION REQUIRED

Rationale and Objectives

Recent trends in higher education have called for the creation and development of historical consciousness in undergraduates now and in the future. History studies the growth and development of human society from a number of perspectives such as—political, social, economic and/or cultural. From one perspective, historical awareness is a valuable aid in the analysis of present-day problems because historical forces and traditions have created modern life and lie just beneath its surface. From a second perspective, the historical past is an indispensable source of identity and of values, which facilitate social harmony and cooperative effort. Along with this observation, it should be noted that historical study can produce intercultural understanding by tracing cultural differences to their origins in the past. A third perspective on the need for historical awareness is that knowledge of history helps us to learn from the past to make better, more well-informed decisions in the present and the future.

The requirement of a course that is historical in method and content presumes that "history" designates a sequence of past events or a narrative whose intent or effect is to represent both the relationship between events and change over time. The requirement also presumes that these are human events and that history includes all that has been felt, thought, imagined, said, and done by human beings. The opportunities for nurturing historical consciousness are nearly unlimited. History is present in the languages, art, music, literatures, philosophy, religion, and the natural sciences, as well as in the social science traditionally called History.

The justifications for how the course fits each of the criteria need to be clear both in the application tables and the course materials. The Historical Awareness designation requires consistent analysis of the broader historical context of past events and persons, of cause and effect, and of change over time. Providing intermittent, anecdotal historical context of people and events usually will not suffice to meet the Historical Awareness criteria. A Historical Awareness course will instead embed systematic historical analysis in the core of the syllabus, including readings and assignments. For courses focusing on the history of a field of study, the applicant needs to show both how the field of study is affected by political, social, economic, and/or cultural conditions AND how political, social, economic, and/or cultural conditions are affected by the field of study.

<td>SPORTS IN LITERATURE AND FILM, ENH 140AA, traces the history of sports in America from the early 17th Century to the present. Sports are not isolated &quot;games&quot; but reflect the times in which they originate and thrive. As a microcosm of their society, they may reinforce or challenge the prevailing mores, but invariably they shed public light on issues that have been festering in the dark, involving racism, sexism, competition, and capitalism, among others.</td>

3. There is a disciplined systematic examination of human institutions as they change over time. ENH 140AA examines the evolution of sports from the early days of "rounders," a primitive form of baseball spread across the country by Civil War veterans to the high powered billion dollar NFL empire today. Along the way sports has influenced American society, while being influenced by it; society's changes over time run parallel to, and overlap, that of sports. As a result, the world of sports, closely linked with society, has become more secular, focused on equality, specialization, legalization, rules, bureaucracy, and quantification. [[ Sample Questions:

1. TRUE or FALSE: In both the world of movies and sports, at first the power resided with the owners and management, but movies and sports gained their highest popularity when the power shifted to the individual star whom people identify with and will pay to see.

2. What do sports narratives and religion have in common?
   A) They are not necessary for physical survival like food and water, but they nourish the spirit
   B) They offer a diversion from the routine and anxieties of modern life
   C) In a world of chaos and unpredictability, they offer a sense of stability and structure

3. TRUE or FALSE: Team sports evolved from individual ones as society evolved from single farmers working on a single farm to today's more interconnected workplace where the "team" is more important than any one individual.

4. The rules governing sports are similar to the rules governing overall society in what way?
   A) They change daily, they are created and known only by those in power, and they are unpopular
   B) They are rarely enforced, they seem arbitrary, and there are no appeals
   C) Ideally, they apply equally to all, they are known by all, and they are essentially accepted by all
   D) Unwritten rules will always be more important than written ones

THE ELEMENTS OF WRITING ABOUT LITERATURE AND FILM

Elizabeth McMahan
Robert Funk
Susan Day
Preface

This slim text contains the essentials for understanding and writing about literature and film. Despite its brevity, the book is comprehensive. Everything beginning students need to know in order to appreciate and write well about literature and film is here, clearly explained and abundantly illustrated.

The literary approach is mainly traditional (formalist), but reader response (subjective) critics will find that this book incorporates their insights as well. The chapter on film, which dovetails with the chapters on fiction, poetry, and drama, offers ample explanations of techniques that make the study of film unique. In the chapters devoted to writing instruction, film receives equal treatment with fiction, poetry, and drama.

The text is divided into two parts. The first section, "Analyzing Literature and Film," explains in four chapters how to go about understanding fiction, poetry, drama, and film. The second part, "Writing About Literature and Film," provides instruction in conventional literary writing and also encourages the use of writing during all phases of literary study—annotating texts, taking notes, jotting down reactions, drafting responses, writing to explore ideas. That is, it encourages writing as a mode of learning, as a means of sharpening critical thinking. Of course, it also includes traditional instruction on finding an approach, devising a thesis, organizing the ideas, and maintaining a critical focus, as well as offering advice about drafting, revising, quoting, documenting, proofreading, and editing.
