Arizona State University Criteria Checklist for

GLOBAL AWARENESS [G]

Rationale and Objectives

Human organizations and relationships have evolved from being family and village centered to modern global interdependence. The greatest challenge in the nuclear age is developing and maintaining a global perspective which fosters international cooperation. While the modern world is comprised of politically independent states, people must transcend nationalism and recognize the significant interdependence among peoples of the world. The exposure of students to different cultural systems provides the background of thought necessary to developing a global perspective.

Cultural learning is present in many disciplines. Exposure to perspectives on art, business, engineering, music, and the natural and social sciences that lead to an understanding of the contemporary world supports the view that intercultural interaction has become a daily necessity. The complexity of American society forces people to balance regional and national goals with global concerns. Many of the most serious problems are world issues and require solutions which exhibit mutuality and reciprocity. No longer are hunger, ecology, health care delivery, language planning, information exchanges, economic and social developments, law, technology transfer, philosophy, and the arts solely national concerns; they affect all the people of the world. Survival may be dependent on the ability to generate global solutions to some of the most pressing problems.

The word university, from universitas, implies that knowledge comes from many sources and is not restricted to local, regional, or national perspectives. The Global Awareness Area recognizes the need for an understanding of the values, elements, and social processes of cultures other than the culture of the United States. Learning which recognizes the nature of others cultures and the relationship of America's cultural system to generic human goals and welfare will help create the multicultural and global perspective necessary for effective interaction in the human community.

Courses which meet the requirement in global awareness are of one or more of the following types: (1) in-depth area studies which are concerned with an examination of culture-specific elements of a region of the world, country, or culture group, (2) the study of contemporary non-English language courses that have a significant cultural component, (3) comparative cultural studies with an emphasis on non-U.S. areas, and (4) in-depth studies of non-U.S. centered cultural interrelationships of global scope such as the global interdependence produced by problems of world ecology, multinational corporations, migration, and the threat of nuclear war.

Explain in detail which student activities correspond to the specific designation criteria.

Please use the following organizer to explain how the criteria are being met.

Criteria (from checksheet)	How course meets spirit (contextualize specific examples in next column)	Please provide detailed evidence of how course meets criteria (i.e., where in syllabus)
1: Studies must be composed of subject matter that addresses or leads to an understanding of the contemporary world outside the U.S.	The course examines the global language of human rights from the perspective of literature and culture, focusing on local vernaculars of human rights in many locations around the world, including examples in Europe, Asia, Africa, and South America.	Unit 1 explores how the global language of human rights developed from sources including French novels, Cuban photojournalism, and Russian dissident texts. Unit 2 investigates cultural responses to global atrocities including the Holocaust and mass killings in Indonesia. Unit 3 explores examples of cultural dissent in Czechoslovakia and Chile.
2d: Cultural significance of a non-US-centered global issue.	The course explores the cultural significance of a range of non-US-based human rights issues (that are, of course, also relevant to the US), including refugee rights (Syria, Vietnam, Sudan), anti-torture politics (Chile, Jordan, Guantanamo Bay, Cuba), humanitarian aid (Liberia, Rwanda, Turkey), and free expression (Czech Republic, Russia, China).	Unit 2 includes class sessions focused on refugees (Syria, Vietnam, Sudan), torture (Chile, Jordan, Guantanamo Bay, Cuba), and humanitarian aid (Liberia, Rwanda, Turkey). Unit 3 includes a session on freedom of expression from a global perspective, drawing on international legal documents and systems (rather than the US First Amendment context).

ENG 494. Literature and Human Rights

Course Description

This course will introduce students to the thriving transdisciplinary subfield of literature and human rights, which explores the many historical and contemporary intersections of creative expression and global human rights activism. During our weekly meetings, we will read novels and poetry, view art and films, and discuss a wide variety of topics, including the origins of the human rights imagination, refugee rights, humanitarian aid, anti-torture politics, Holocaust memory, and dissent & free expression. Our historical case studies will be drawn from across the world, as well as closer to home in the United States, in order to explore how ideas and practices related to human rights are shaped through conversations across cultures. Over the course of the semester, you will also have the opportunity to develop creative, written, and oral projects that explore additional topics that are of particular interest to you, from immigration rights to environmental justice. Through written assignments, students will develop their ability to make critical and interpretive arguments about human rights topics using a variety of forms of literary and artistic evidence. Together we will use literature and art to investigate the contested past, present, and future of the global human rights imagination.

Description:

What can the study of literature teach us about human rights? How have writers and artists participated in the ongoing struggle for human rights around the world? This course will introduce students to the thriving transdisciplinary subfield of literature and human rights, which explores the many historical and contemporary intersections of creative expression and global human rights activism. During our weekly meetings, we will read novels and poetry, view art and films, and discuss a wide variety of topics, including the origins of the human rights imagination, refugee rights, humanitarian aid, anti-torture politics, Holocaust memory, and dissent & free expression. Our historical case studies will be drawn from across the world, as well as closer to home in the United States, in order to explore how ideas and practices related to human rights are shaped through conversations across cultures. Over the course of the semester, you will also have the opportunity to develop creative, written, and oral projects that explore additional topics that are of particular interest to you, from immigration rights to environmental justice. Together we will use literature and art to investigate the contested past, present, and future of the global human rights imagination.

Requirements:

- Class participation (20%): In-class discussion will be a major feature of this course. As a result, a great deal of emphasis will be placed on both your attendance and participation. Students should complete all of the required readings (and viewings) on time and be prepared to offer comments and questions for group discussion. You are also required to visit office hours at least once. Please note, in formulating your participation grade, I will give significant weight to your effort and improvement over the course of the semester.
- Creative assignment (10%): Details will be distributed in advance of the deadline, but please note: this short writing assignment will be graded on a “credit/no credit” basis, so have fun and take a few risks! Due by 5pm on 3/2/18.
- Mini-Essays (20%): Over the course of the semester, each student will complete four mini-essays, one for each unit. These are more formal than response papers—each mini-essay will include a strong analytical claim related to the week’s topic and provide supporting examples/evidence from our course materials. I will provide timely feedback on each mini-essay to help you build towards writing a successful final paper.
- Two In-Class Presentations (worth a total of 20%): Each student will prepare two in-class presentations:
 1. Each student will sign up to be a student “expert” for one class session, offering a polished presentation that introduces the material under discussion. The student expert will then help to facilitate our day’s conversation. Students will consult with the instructor on their presentation during the week before their presentation. (15%)
 2. On the last day of class, each student will briefly present to the group on the topic of their final paper project (see next bullet). (5%)

- Final paper (30%): Early in the semester, in consultation with me, each student will select a topic for their final paper that explores a “new human right” that we haven’t explored in class (for example: disability rights, indigenous rights, or water rights) through the lens of literature and art. This paper will be a persuasive essay rather than a “report,” making a central interpretive and/or critical claim backed up by evidence of from your chosen primary and secondary sources. Due by 5pm on 5/1/18.

*Please note: all due dates are marked in the class schedule with a ★

Course policies:

- Attendance: I'll be passing around an attendance sheet at the beginning of every class, and each student will be allowed one unexcused absence (no questions asked) before they receive a grading penalty. Please contact me regarding make-up work for all excused (for “religious observances/practices,” “university sanctioned events/activities,” etc.).
- Collaboration and academic honesty: All papers and exams must be the student’s own work. What this means is that students are permitted, and expected, to discuss their ideas with both me and other students and to request and accept advice. But if a piece of information or an idea comes from someone else, students should do the same thing that they would do when it comes from a book, an article, or online: cite the source. All academic work is collaborative in the sense that it builds on what others have written. Using such material is not plagiarism as long as it is appropriately cited. When using the same words as the source, put them inside quotation marks. If you are uncertain, please ask (don't guess). Here is a link to ASU's official policies on Academic Integrity:

- o <https://provost.asu.edu/academic-integrity>

- Disability accommodation: Please remember to register with the Disability Resource Center (DRC) and submit appropriate documentation from the DRC so that I can be as helpful as possible.
- Laptops and electronic devices: As some of our readings are in PDF form or available as e-books, electronic devices, including laptops, are allowed in class, but ONLY for referencing class materials and notes. Phones should be shut off during class time. If I feel this policy is being abused, I reserve the right to ban laptops entirely. Warning: professors can tell when you're shopping for shoes or checking social media during class!
- Student conduct: Remember, we're all in this together. Even when we disagree, we will treat one another with respect. If any of the course material raises concerns for you, please don't hesitate to reach out to me directly. Finally, I reserve the right to act in accordance with the university's policies regarding disruptive, threatening, and violent behavior:
<https://www.asu.edu/aad/manuals/ssm/ssm104-02.html>
- Office hours: I am always available during office hours to discuss any matter related to the course or if you just want to introduce yourself. I encourage you to visit regularly, but at minimum I expect everyone to come to office hours at least once during the term. If my office hours conflict with your class or work schedule, I'm also available by appointment.
- A final note: This syllabus is subject to change, including the schedule of readings and assignments. But I will notify you in advance and make sure that the syllabus uploaded on Blackboard is up to date.

CITIZEN

AN AMERICAN LYRIC

CLAUDIA RANKINE

"Claudia Rankine's Citizen comes at you like doom. It's the best note in the wrong song that is America. Its various realities—'mistaken' identity, social racism, the whole fabric of urban and suburban life—are almost too much to bear, but you bear them, because it's the truth. Citizen is Rankine's Spoon River Anthology, an epic as large and frightening and beautiful as the country and various emotional states that produced it."—Hilton Als

"Citizen is one of the best books I've ever wanted not to read. . . . Its genius—and after having spent so much time, some of it reluctant, with this book, I do think that word is appropriate—resides in the capacity to make so many different versions of American life proper to itself, to instruct us in the depth and variety of our participation in a narrative of race that we recount and reinstate, even when we speak as though it weren't there."—Jonathan Farmer, *Slate

"What does it mean to be a black citizen in the US of the early twenty-first century? Claudia Rankine's brilliant, terse, and parabolic prose poems have a shock value rarely found in poetry. These tales of everyday life—whether the narrator's or the lives of young black men like Trayvon Martin and James Craig Anderson—dwell on the most normal exteriors and the most ordinary of daily situations so as to expose what is really there: a racism so guarded and carefully masked as to make it all the more insidious. . . . Citizen is an unforgettable book."—Marjorie Perloff

"An especially vital book for this moment in time. . . . The realization at the end of this book sits heavily upon the heart: 'This is how you are a citizen,' Rankine writes. 'Come on. Let it go. Move on.' As Rankine's brilliant, disabusing work, always aware of its ironies, reminds us, 'moving on' is not synonymous with 'leaving behind.'" —Dan Chiasson, *The New Yorker

This book is made possible through a partnership with the College of St. Benedict, and honors the legacy of S. Mariella Gable, a distinguished teacher at the College.
