Is this a cross-listed course? No If yes, please identify course(s): _____

Is this a shared course? No If so, list all academic units offering this course: _____

Note- For courses that are crosslisted and/or shared, a letter of support from the chair/director of each department that offers the course is required for each designation requested. By submitting this letter of support, the chair/director agrees to ensure that all faculty teaching the course are aware of the General Studies designation(s) and will teach the course in a manner that meets the criteria for each approved designation.

Is this a permanent-numbered course with topics? No

If yes, all topics under this permanent-numbered course must be taught in a manner that meets the criteria for the approved designation(s). It is the responsibility of the chair/director to ensure that all faculty teaching the course are aware of the General Studies designation(s) and adhere to the above guidelines. _____ (Required)

Requested designation: Humanities, Arts and Design–HU Mandatory Review: ~~Yes~~ No

Note- a separate proposal is required for each designation.

Eligibility: Permanent numbered courses must have completed the university’s review and approval process. For the rules governing approval of omnibus courses, contact Phyllis.Lucie@asu.edu.

Submission deadlines dates are as follow:
For Fall 2018 Effective Date: October 1, 2017
For Spring 2019 Effective Date: March 10, 2018

Area(s) proposed course will serve:
 A single course may be proposed for more than one core or awareness area. A course may satisfy a core area requirement and more than one awareness area requirements concurrently, but may not satisfy requirements in two core areas simultaneously, even if approved for those areas. With departmental consent, an approved General Studies course may be counted toward both the General Studies requirement and the major program of study.

Arizona State University Criteria Checklist for HUMANITIES, ARTS AND DESIGN [HU]

Rationale and Objectives

The humanities disciplines are concerned with questions of human existence and meaning, the nature of thinking and knowing, with moral and aesthetic experience. The humanities develop values of all kinds by making the human mind more supple, critical, and expansive. They are concerned with the study of the textual and artistic traditions of diverse cultures, including traditions in literature, philosophy, religion, ethics, history, and aesthetics. In sum, these disciplines explore the range of human thought and its application to the past and present human environment. They deepen awareness of the diversity of the human heritage and its traditions and histories and they may also promote the application of this knowledge to contemporary societies.

The study of the arts and design, like the humanities, deepens the student's awareness of the diversity of human societies and cultures. The arts have as their primary purpose the creation and study of objects, installations, performances and other means of expressing or conveying aesthetic concepts and ideas. Design study concerns itself with material objects, images and spaces, their historical development, and their significance in society and culture. Disciplines in the arts and design employ modes of thought and communication that are often nonverbal, which means that courses in these areas tend to focus on objects, images, and structures and/or on the practical techniques and historical development of artistic and design traditions. The past and present accomplishments of artists and designers help form the student's ability to perceive aesthetic qualities of art work and design.

The Humanities, Arts and Design are an important part of the General Studies Program, for they provide an opportunity for students to study intellectual and imaginative traditions and to observe and/or learn the production of art work and design. The knowledge acquired in courses fulfilling the Humanities, Arts and Design requirement may encourage students to investigate their own personal philosophies or beliefs and to understand better their own social experience. In sum, the Humanities, Arts and Design core area enables students to broaden and deepen their consideration of the variety of human experience.

Explain in detail which student activities correspond to the specific designation criteria. Please use the following organizer to explain how the criteria are being met.

Criteria (from checksheet)	How course meets spirit (contextualize specific examples in next column)	Please provide detailed evidence of how course meets criteria (i.e., where in syllabus)
1: Emphasizes the study of values...	The course traces the development of ideas and values of human rights from the French and American Revolutions through the late twentieth century.	The course focuses on the ways that cultural artifacts have shaped the development of a "global human rights" imagination. We trace the evolution of human rights values across texts like Richardson's Pamela, Thoreau's "Civil Disobedience," Havel's "Power of the Powerless," Solzhenitsyn's Gulag Archipelago, Bolano's Distant Star, and Rankine's Citizen.
2: Interpretation, analysis, and creation of texts...	Throughout the course our primary objects of study are a range of cultural texts, including literature, art, photography, film, and comic books. Students also complete their own creative assignment related to course themes.	Over the course of the semester we interpret, analyze, and compare a range of cultural forms, including epistolary novels (particularly Samuel Richardson's Pamela), photography (such as the Family of Man exhibition), literary journalism (Gulag Archipelago), graphic novels (Maus), poetry (W. H. Auden and Claudia Rankine), novels (Distant Star) and film (The Act of Killing). Students also complete creative activities in class, and one of the course requirements is a creative assignment worth 10% of the final grade.
4a: Concerns development of human thought	The course contextualizes all of these cultural texts within the history of ideas about human rights. We read philosophy alongside creative works.	Within the field of human rights thought, we study refugee writing in the context of Hannah Arendt's thinking about refugees and human rights, and we explore ideas about civil resistance from Thoreau to Havel, examining works of conceptual art created under repressive political conditions (the MoMA show "Transmissions.").
4c: Emphasizes aesthetic experience	The course explores both how writers and artists responded to human rights issues throughout history and also analyzes the aesthetic experience that their writing and art creates for readers/viewers.	The course explores the aesthetic and ethical experience of viewing, reading, and consuming works of art related to human rights, including epistolary novels (Richardson's Pamela) photographs (The Family of Man exhibition), film (refugee short films & The Act of Killing), graphic novels (Spiegelman's Maus) and poetic-criticism (Rankine's Citizen).

ENG 494. Literature and Human Rights

Course Description

This course will introduce students to the thriving transdisciplinary subfield of literature and human rights, which explores the many historical and contemporary intersections of creative expression and global human rights activism. During our weekly meetings, we will read novels and poetry, view art and films, and discuss a wide variety of topics, including the origins of the human rights imagination, refugee rights, humanitarian aid, anti-torture politics, Holocaust memory, and dissent & free expression. Our historical case studies will be drawn from across the world, as well as closer to home in the United States, in order to explore how ideas and practices related to human rights are shaped through conversations across cultures. Over the course of the semester, you will also have the opportunity to develop creative, written, and oral projects that explore additional topics that are of particular interest to you, from immigration rights to environmental justice. Through written assignments, students will develop their ability to make critical and interpretive arguments about human rights topics using a variety of forms of literary and artistic evidence. Together we will use literature and art to investigate the contested past, present, and future of the global human rights imagination.

Description:

What can the study of literature teach us about human rights? How have writers and artists participated in the ongoing struggle for human rights around the world? This course will introduce students to the thriving transdisciplinary subfield of literature and human rights, which explores the many historical and contemporary intersections of creative expression and global human rights activism. During our weekly meetings, we will read novels and poetry, view art and films, and discuss a wide variety of topics, including the origins of the human rights imagination, refugee rights, humanitarian aid, anti-torture politics, Holocaust memory, and dissent & free expression. Our historical case studies will be drawn from across the world, as well as closer to home in the United States, in order to explore how ideas and practices related to human rights are shaped through conversations across cultures. Over the course of the semester, you will also have the opportunity to develop creative, written, and oral projects that explore additional topics that are of particular interest to you, from immigration rights to environmental justice. Through written assignments, students will develop their ability to make critical and interpretive arguments about human rights topics using a variety of forms of literary and artistic evidence. Together we will use literature and art to investigate the contested past, present, and future of the global human rights imagination.

Requirements:

- Class participation (20%): In-class discussion will be a major feature of this course. As a result, a great deal of emphasis will be placed on both your attendance and participation. Students should complete all of the required readings (and viewings) on time and be prepared to offer comments and questions for group discussion. You are also required to visit office hours at least once. Please note, in formulating your participation grade, I will give significant weight to your effort and improvement over the course of the semester.
- Creative assignment (10%): Details will be distributed in advance of the deadline, but please note: this short writing assignment will be graded on a “credit/no credit” basis, so have fun and take a few risks! Due by 5pm on 3/2/18.
- Mini-Essays (20%): Over the course of the semester, each student will complete four mini-essays, one for each unit. These are more formal than response papers—each mini-essay will include a strong analytical claim related to the week’s topic and provide supporting examples/evidence from our course materials. I will provide timely feedback on each mini-essay to help you build towards writing a successful final paper.
- Two In-Class Presentations (worth a total of 20%): Each student will prepare two in-class presentations:
 1. Each student will sign up to be a student “expert” for one class session, offering a polished presentation that introduces the material under discussion. The student expert will then help to facilitate our day’s conversation. Students will consult with the instructor on their presentation during the week before their presentation. (15%)
 2. On the last day of class, each student will briefly present to the group on the topic of their final paper project (see next bullet). (5%)

- Final paper (30%): Early in the semester, in consultation with me, each student will select a topic for their final paper that explores a “new human right” that we haven’t explored in class (for example: disability rights, indigenous rights, or water rights) through the lens of literature and art. This paper will be a persuasive essay rather than a “report,” making a central interpretive and/or critical claim backed up by evidence of from your chosen primary and secondary sources. Due by 5pm on 5/1/18.

*Please note: all due dates are marked in the class schedule with a ★

Course policies:

- Attendance: I’ll be passing around an attendance sheet at the beginning of every class, and each student will be allowed one unexcused absence (no questions asked) before they receive a grading penalty. Please contact me regarding make-up work for all excused (for “religious observances/practices,” “university sanctioned events/activities,” etc.).
- Collaboration and academic honesty: All papers and exams must be the student’s own work. What this means is that students are permitted, and expected, to discuss their ideas with both me and other students and to request and accept advice. But if a piece of information or an idea comes from someone else, students should do the same thing that they would do when it comes from a book, an article, or online: cite the source. All academic work is collaborative in the sense that it builds on what others have written. Using such material is not plagiarism as long as it is appropriately cited. When using the same words as the source, put them inside quotation marks. If you are uncertain, please ask (don't guess). Here is a link to ASU's official policies on Academic Integrity:

- o <https://provost.asu.edu/academic-integrity>

- Disability accommodation: Please remember to register with the Disability Resource Center (DRC) and submit appropriate documentation from the DRC so that I can be as helpful as possible.
- Laptops and electronic devices: As some of our readings are in PDF form or available as e-books, electronic devices, including laptops, are allowed in class, but ONLY for referencing class materials and notes. Phones should be shut off during class time. If I feel this policy is being abused, I reserve the right to ban laptops entirely. Warning: professors can tell when you're shopping for shoes or checking social media during class!
- Student conduct: Remember, we're all in this together. Even when we disagree, we will treat one another with respect. If any of the course material raises concerns for you, please don't hesitate to reach out to me directly. Finally, I reserve the right to act in accordance with the university's policies regarding disruptive, threatening, and violent behavior:
<https://www.asu.edu/aad/manuals/ssm/ssm104-02.html>
- Office hours: I am always available during office hours to discuss any matter related to the course or if you just want to introduce yourself. I encourage you to visit regularly, but at minimum I expect everyone to come to office hours at least once during the term. If my office hours conflict with your class or work schedule, I'm also available by appointment.
- A final note: This syllabus is subject to change, including the schedule of readings and assignments. But I will notify you in advance and make sure that the syllabus uploaded on Blackboard is up to date.

CITIZEN

AN AMERICAN LYRIC

CLAUDIA RANKINE

"Claudia Rankine's Citizen comes at you like doom. It's the best note in the wrong song that is America. Its various realities—'mistaken' identity, social racism, the whole fabric of urban and suburban life—are almost too much to bear, but you bear them, because it's the truth. Citizen is Rankine's Spoon River Anthology, an epic as large and frightening and beautiful as the country and various emotional states that produced it."—Hilton Als

"Citizen is one of the best books I've ever wanted not to read. . . . Its genius—and after having spent so much time, some of it reluctant, with this book, I do think that word is appropriate—resides in the capacity to make so many different versions of American life proper to itself, to instruct us in the depth and variety of our participation in a narrative of race that we recount and reinstate, even when we speak as though it weren't there."—Jonathan Farmer, *Slate

"What does it mean to be a black citizen in the US of the early twenty-first century? Claudia Rankine's brilliant, terse, and parabolic prose poems have a shock value rarely found in poetry. These tales of everyday life—whether the narrator's or the lives of young black men like Trayvon Martin and James Craig Anderson—dwell on the most normal exteriors and the most ordinary of daily situations so as to expose what is really there: a racism so guarded and carefully masked as to make it all the more insidious. . . . Citizen is an unforgettable book."—Marjorie Perloff

"An especially vital book for this moment in time. . . . The realization at the end of this book sits heavily upon the heart: 'This is how you are a citizen,' Rankine writes. 'Come on. Let it go. Move on.' As Rankine's brilliant, disabusing work, always aware of its ironies, reminds us, 'moving on' is not synonymous with 'leaving behind.'" —Dan Chiasson, *The New Yorker

This book is made possible through a partnership with the College of St. Benedict, and honors the legacy of S. Mariella Gable, a distinguished teacher at the College.
