Rev. 4/2019
Arizona State University Criteria Checklist for

HUMANITIES, ARTS AND DESIGN [HU]

Rationale and Objectives

The humanities disciplines are concerned with questions of human existence and meaning, the nature of thinking and knowing, with moral and aesthetic experience. The humanities develop values of all kinds by making the human mind more supple, critical, and expansive. They are concerned with the study of the textual and artistic traditions of diverse cultures, including traditions in literature, philosophy, religion, ethics, history, and aesthetics. In sum, these disciplines explore the range of human thought and its application to the past and present human environment. They deepen awareness of the diversity of the human heritage and its traditions and histories and they may also promote the application of this knowledge to contemporary societies.

The study of the arts and design, like the humanities, deepens the student’s awareness of the diversity of human societies and cultures. The arts have as their primary purpose the creation and study of objects, installations, performances and other means of expressing or conveying aesthetic concepts and ideas. Design study concerns itself with material objects, images and spaces, their historical development, and their significance in society and culture. Disciplines in the arts and design employ modes of thought and communication that are often nonverbal, which means that courses in these areas tend to focus on objects, images, and structures and/or on the practical techniques and historical development of artistic and design traditions. The past and present accomplishments of artists and designers help form the student’s ability to perceive aesthetic qualities of art work and design.

The Humanities, Arts and Design are an important part of the General Studies Program, for they provide an opportunity for students to study intellectual and imaginative traditions and to observe and/or learn the production of art work and design. The knowledge acquired in courses fulfilling the Humanities, Arts and Design requirement may encourage students to investigate their own personal philosophies or beliefs and to understand better their own social experience. In sum, the Humanities, Arts and Design core area enables students to broaden and deepen their consideration of the variety of human experience.

Course Description and Overview

This course examines the development of Communism in the twentieth century in a global and comparative perspective. Before globalization became such a buzzword, communism was one of the dominant ideologies in shaping the world from the beginning of the twentieth century. Communism has been one of the most influential forms of modernity for over a billion people in the communist world (Russia, Eastern Europe, China, North Korea, Vietnam, Cuba, and elsewhere). Since its introduction, communism has crossed borders and groups, shaping the politics, cultures, economies, and people’s lives. How did various people in the communist world construct their realities and view the world? Why did some communist experiments ultimately fail? What kind of legacies did communism leave in the former communist world? Taking a global approach, this course extends beyond Russia, Eastern Europe, and China to examine the living experiences in Korea, Vietnam, Cambodia, Africa, and elsewhere. The course has three major themes. First, it offers an understanding of the changes and continuities that were embodied in political, social, cultural, and intellectual aspects in the making of communist states. By reading a number of monographs and primary documents, this course examines how communist and socialist theories were adapted to fit different countries’ realities. Second, this course presents an integrated and comparative view of communist states in their global context. We will focus on their involvements in WWII, the Cold War, and the age of globalization. Third, besides the political and cultural transformations, attention will also be given to how revolutions were experienced by those who lived through them. Using memoirs, witness accounts, private writings, documentaries, and other primary sources, students will grasp how historical changes affected the lives of ordinary people.
Course Learning Outcomes

The objectives of this course are fourfold. First, this course will equip students with the knowledge and skills needed to comprehend the historical transformation of the communist world. It will make students well-prepared for their future in-depth study of the histories of examined countries. Second, through a systematic study of major issues and themes in communist history, students will be able to think critically and historically about how these societies operate today. Third, students will have an overview of the recent scholarship on the major conceptual themes. Finally, this course will also improve students’ writing, research, and critical thinking skills. Through reading primary sources, writing essay assignments, and class discussions, students will develop skills in historical analysis and critical writing.

Course Readings

The following book has been ordered and are also available at the ASU bookstore. You may also purchase the book from any online bookstore.

Other required and optional readings can be found in electronic format on Canvas under the “Files” tab.

Course Requirements

• Reading: The readings will consist mainly of secondary materials, with some primary documents. You are expected to read all assigned works carefully before the class in order to discuss them thoughtfully and in detail. In preparation for each class, please take notes and formulate questions and critiques of the readings.

• Attendance and Participation. The format of the class will be a mixture of lecture and discussion. Attendance is mandatory. If you have to miss class for any reason, you must notify the professor in advance by email. Unexcused absences will adversely affect your final grade. Note: More than three unexcused absences will result in one letter grade deduction. More than six absences will prevent you from passing the class. You are required to prepare a package of 3×5 index cards. At the end of each class, write your name on a card, then give the card to the professor. You are encouraged to add questions or ideas on the cards. I may not be able to address most of what you write, but what you write will help me know what areas need additional explanation. Another purpose of the cards is to check your attendance. Turn in only your own card. In order to gain maximum benefit from the class, you are expected to read all assigned works carefully before the class.
In addition to lectures, discussions are a significant component of the course. You are expected to participate in classroom discussions to assure a strong grade. Along with your active participation in the discussion, you will be introducing the assigned readings for a given week. This includes providing a five-minute introduction of the reading at the start of the class. The introduction should include the main arguments from the reading as well as connect these to the course in general. You may earn bonus credits by actively participating in discussions and presenting critical insight.

Two Assignments. You are to complete two take-home assignments. The take-home exams will test your knowledge of the course materials through short essay questions and one long essay. Topics and questions to be answered will be posted on Canvas at least two weeks prior to the due date. The purpose of the long essay is to work on how to analyze a primary source critically and thoroughly. The take home exams should be written individually; you are not allowed to collaborate or consult each other, and you are not allowed to seek outside help. Please refer to the section on academic integrity for more on ASU policies.

Quiz. Multiple choice quizzes on the lectures and readings will be held in lecture throughout the course. You should be able to get a good score by taking lecture notes and reading the assigned readings.

Final paper: The type of final paper you write depends on the nature of your interests. In consultation with the instructor, it is up to you to decide what type of paper you will write. For example, you may want to write either a research paper based on primary sources or a historiographical paper focusing on any topic of your choice related to the overall theme of the course. In addition to the instructor’s feedback, you will read, comment, and offer suggestions on the research of your peers. In the final week, you should present your research in the Student Symposium. Instruction on the symposium and review process will be provided in week 8. Your final paper should demonstrate scholarly precision in the reasoning, citation of evidence, and language. The paper should be double-spaced, with standard font sizes and one-inch margins.

Extra Credit. Students can earn extra credit up to a maximum of 3% of the final grade by watching selected documentaries or movies provided by professor, and submitting a brief reflective one-page report, each counting for 1%. Please consult with the professor in advance.
