What is IADP?

Arizona State University works with leading international partner universities to offer International Accelerated Degree Programs. These exciting programs allow motivated students to earn undergraduate degrees from their home universities and complete one-year master’s degrees at ASU.

The 3+1+1 format

The most common format of IADP is 3+1+1. The students complete the first three years of an undergraduate program at their home universities, take advanced courses at ASU in the fourth year of study and remain at ASU for a fifth year to complete their master’s degrees. The GRE and GMAT are waived for all participants in this program.

Year 1: complete at home university
Year 2: complete at home university
Year 3: complete at home university
Year 4: complete at ASU and receive bachelor’s degree from home university
Year 5: complete at ASU and receive master’s degree from ASU

Student eligibility

Students must meet the requirements of their home university and ASU. To qualify, students will need proof of the required previous courses, a minimum 3.00 GPA (4.00 = "A"), a qualifying English proficiency test score and financial guarantee (required for SEVIS I-20).

Dates to remember

October 1
IADP application is available online.

March 1
Priority application due. Be sure to submit:
1) a copy of your passport
2) a financial guarantee form
3) transcripts in the original language accompanied by an official English translation (minimum of five semesters of coursework)

May 1
Last day to submit English proficiency score.

Learn more

Please go to the ASU International Accelerated Degree Programs website to learn more about the programs and formats offered as well as the requirements and online application.